Ground broken for patrol station

A groundbreaking ceremony was held Tuesday for the Missouri State Highway Patrol Satellite station to be built at the corner of Keystone Drive and Highway 60 East. Construction will start next week on the $175,000 brick building which is expected to be completed this year. A total of 35 employes will be assigned to the station, including 28 troopers. Turning the first shovel is former Mayor Frank Ferrell, who helped initiate the campaign that resulted in the building being located in Sikeston. Other dignitaries on hand, from left, are Lt. Gene Lemonds, Lt. Joe Cassidy and Capt. Wayne Brooks of the highway patrol; Robert Matthews and Scott Matthews of Sikeston; Melvin Dace; State Rep. O.L. Wallis of Poplar Bluff; State Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin of Hornersville; State Rep. C.F. Cline of Sikeston; Col. Sam Smith, highway patrol superintendent; State Reps. Gene Copeland of New Madrid and Fred DeField of Charleston; Sikeston Mayor Don Fulton; and David Friedman, president of the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce.

Committees organized against petition drive

"The city manager form of government is not perfect, but well ahead of what's in second place," City Councilman Steve Sikes told a group of about 70 people who met Tuesday night at the Holiday Inn to form committees to fight an attempt to change the present form of city government.

The group met in response to a petition drive which seeks to put on the ballot the question of keeping the present city manager form of government.

The petition, which needs only about 400 signatures, has about 800, according to a telephone call to The Daily Standard from someone claiming to be associated with the petition drive. However, that individual refused to identify himself, as have the organizors of the petition drive.

The group Tuesday night formed a steering committee to guide the fight against the proposal. The committee consists of Dan Norton, chairman; Art Hobbs, secretary-treasurer; David Friedman, Rick Adams, Louis Wiggins, Mrs. Pat Benney, Kendall Sikes, Frank Ferrell, Bill Sikes, Bob Mitchell, Ira Keller, Jim Bearid, Dr. William Critchelow, John Brannock, Mrs. Keith Collins and Taylor Noles.

Three subcommittees were also formed. They are the finance committee, publicity committee and the canvassing and surveying committee.

Sikes said the city was $103,000 in debt when the city manager form of government took over. One half the debt was repaid the following year, the rest of the debt was repaid the next year.

In addition, the tax rate was lowered, outstanding loans renegotiated and the first detailed budget was adopted.

"The city manager form of government enables us to spend the city's money more efficiently, getting the most from our money," Sikes said.

Referring to the criticism of the method of hiring of public officials, and the hiring of an out-of-town man as public safety director, Sikes said "The public safety director was not hired on the basis of political pull or who he was related to."

Sikes' father, Kendall, a former city councilman, outlined the structure of the city manager form of government, saying the council is elected by the voters, and then hires a trained city manager who can be fired at any time.

"If that doesn't give you control over what happens, I don't know what does," Sikes said.

He said the council also hires a city clerk who serves as a check on the manager by keeping all the city books. The books are open to public inspection.

The budget is controlled by the City Council and the council must approve any changes in it, he said.

The city manager cannot spend any money outside the budget without the council's authorization, he said.

Fielding Potashnick told the group that city ordinances would have to be rewritten.

As an example of why they would have to be rewritten he pointed out that ordinances now say building permits must be issued by an inspector appointed by the city manager. What happens when there is no inspector appointed by a city manager? he asked, where do you get building permits or bank loans?

If the mayor form of government is voted in then the offices of police chief and police judge would be elective also.

Potashnick said the best way to get elected police chief is not to arrest any more people than you have to, and the way to be elected police judge is not to convict any more people than you have to.

Charles Mitchell said he is afraid that if the city elects aldermen, each would look over only the interest of his specific wards, and not the city as a whole.

Norton said that "everybody can think of ways to improve the city, but progress lies with the present form of government."

Dexter woman, daughter killed in head-on collision

A young Dexter woman and her 3-year-old daughter were killed and nine persons were injured in three area traffic accidents Tuesday and early today, according to the highway patrol.

The deaths were the 61st and 62nd on Southeast Missouri roads this year, compared to 57 at the same last year.

The fatal accident resulted from a head-on collision involving a station wagon and a pickup truck at 12:05 a.m. today on Route AD two miles north of Dexter.

The collision occurred when the driver of a southbound pickup, Loren Dale Sielert, 17, of Dexter, crossed the center line and struck a northbound stationwagon driven by Marbadene Gromer, 25, of Dexter, killing her and her daughter, Billie Jo Gromer, 3.

The bodies were taken to Rainey Funeral Home in Dexter, where arrangements are incomplete.

Sielert and a passenger, Linda Phillips, 17, of Puxico, received minor injuries, and two other passengers in the Gromer vehicle, Angela Kay Gromer, 5, another daughter of the driver, and Lillie Foster, 28, of Dexter, suffered serious injuries. All four were taken to Dexter Memorial Hospital.

A Caruthersville youth received moderate injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 10:40 a.m. Tuesday on Route D one mile south of the Stubtown Community in Pemiscot County when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel of a northbound car, which ran off the road into a ditch.

Four Charleston residents suffered minor injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday two and a half miles north of Charleston on Route N.

The accident occurred when a southbound pickup driven by Rosemary Scheffer, 16, of Charleston slid off the wet road while traveling at a high rate of speed and struck a metal culvert.

Two passengers, James Toon, 12, and Michael Demann, 12, of Charleston, were injured when thrown from the vehicle. Also receiving injuries were the driver and another passenger, Michael Brashears, 13, of Charleston. All four were treated by Dr. Gregorio Rodrigus of Charleston, and the Sheffer girl was transferred to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Rape suspect held

NEW MADRID — George Johnson, 22, of Catron, is in custody, suspected of rape of a nine-year-old Catron girl, according to a New Madrid County sheriff's deputy, who said the alleged offense occurred about 8:30 Monday night in Catron.

The girl was treated at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston and a complaint against Johnson was signed Tuesday by the girl's parents.

Bond of $500 has been set for Johnson.

Roundtable

Sikeston finances

For decades, the financial state of American cities has been a topic of endless discussion. There never seemed to be enough money to meet the needs and demands of the public and of the various pressure groups.

Then in the past few years, inflation soared and cities found themselves in worse financial trouble than ever before. New York City is the best known example, but it is certainly not the only city in financial trouble.

Generally, the smaller communities in the nation are in better financial condition than the large metropolitan centers.

Sikeston's budget is balanced, but because of inflation, the city council may have to consider finding additional money next year, or cutting back on some city services.

There is a good chance the public will be asked to make the decision. The city council can raise the property tax only five more cents before having to ask the public to vote on further increases.

Sikeston's financial condition was the topic of this week's discussion between City Manager Charles Church and the press.

The following is edited from transcripts of the press conference:

Q. What is the state of city revenues in Sikeston, are we in trouble and what avenues are open for increasing that revenue base?

A. The city's revenue base is largely dependent on property tax. The 1976-77 budget receives 30 per cent of its revenue from the property taxes. The city property tax base this year is $27,180,000 of assessed valuation. One-cent property tax applied to this assessed valuation will produce approximately $2,600. An increase in property tax rate of 10 cents would produce $25,000. The city's budget for 76-77 is $1,309,200.

Property tax assessment does not keep pace with inflation. As a result, city revenues do not keep pace with inflation. In general, inflation has exceeded the city's revenue growth and as a result we have to cut back in services or raise additional revenue to compensate for that.

In addition to inflation problems with property tax, we have several other problems. We receive $125,000 a year from Missouri Gasoline tax. Gasoline consumption has gone down or remained very stable. It was growing at six to seven per cent a year. We've lost that growth potential.

The Legislature, by a vote of the people, repealed the personal property tax on household goods. That has affected the city budget. The state legislature has eliminated intangible taxes on personal interest and investment incomes that also caused a reduction, almost one-half our intangible tax.

These attempts to equalize our state taxing system have had a detrimental effect in terms of the city's ability to produce additional income.

The city's budget is balanced, but has been affected by inflation. but the larger question is, "how much revenue do we plan to produce to support various services?"

There are services the city of Sikeston has not provided at this point. We could hire additional police or firemen, provide improved park maintenance, we could have an extremely accelerated street program to take care of streets like Murray Lane and Ingram and Ables roads.

The city's budget is now geared to maintaining what we have, but we are not moving forward in terms of city programs.

I think the second part of the question is, "if we want to do more, where does the income come from?"

There are several sources, property tax would be one. As I mentioned earlier, one cent of additional property tax would produce approximately $2,600 additional income. So to raise an additional $260,000 worth of income you would have to increase the property tax rate an additional one dollar. Our present property tax rate is $1.51.

To do something very significant in terms of street construction, for example, lets say repaving or resurfacing Murray Lane or Ables Road, to

Stoddard County to vote on sheltered workshop

BLOOMFIELD — On Aug. 3, Stoddard County voters will cast ballots in a special election to determine the fate of a proposed countywide sheltered workshop, seven proposed amendments to the state constitution, a number of statewide offices and several county offices.

The special election will give county voters a chance to approve or reject a tax levy of 10 cents per $100 assessed property valuation to establish and maintain a countywide sheltered workshop.

In the local primary election, all of the races for county offices have developed on the Democratic side of the ballot. The only Republican seeking a countywide office is incumbent sheriff Ralph Mouser, who is unopposed in his bid for the GOP nomination.

Unopposed candidates for Republican committeeman and committeewoman positions are Bob Beal of Bloomfield Route Three and Vera Wellman of Bloomfield Route Three, Castor Township, and Elmer Kinkade of Bernie and Virginia E. Hendricks of Dexter, Liberty Township.

A number of races have developed on the Democratic side of the ballot in both state and county positions.

Incumbent 25th District State Sen. Nelson B. Tinnin of Hornersville is opposed in his bid for re-election by James R. "Bob" Blades of Parma Route Two.

A Caruthersville youth received moderate injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 10:40 a.m. Tuesday on Route D one mile south of the Stubtown Community in Pemiscot County when he apparently fell asleep at the wheel of a northbound car, which ran off the road into a ditch.

Four Charleston residents suffered minor injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday two and a half miles north of Charleston on Route N.

The accident occurred when a southbound pickup driven by Rosemary Scheffer, 16, of Charleston slid off the wet road while traveling at a high rate of speed and struck a metal culvert.

Two passengers, James Toon, 12, and Michael Demann, 12, of Charleston, were injured when thrown from the vehicle. Also receiving injuries were the driver and another passenger, Michael Brashears, 13, of Charleston. All four were treated by Dr. Gregorio Rodrigus of Charleston, and the Sheffer girl was transferred to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Rape suspect held

NEW MADRID — George Johnson, 22, of Catron, is in custody, suspected of rape of a nine-year-old Catron girl, according to a New Madrid County sheriff's deputy, who said the alleged offense occurred about 8:30 Monday night in Catron.

The girl was treated at Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston and a complaint against Johnson was signed Tuesday by the girl's parents.

Bond of $500 has been set for Johnson.

DON'T TRADE UNEMPLOYMENT FOR SOCIALISM

Now that the Democratic National Convention is in the history books, it is a good time to take a hard look at a major plank of that party's platform that could be devastating if it becomes national policy. The plan calls for a reduction of the adult unemployment rate to 3 per cent within four years.

On its face, that goal is laudable enough. No one likes unemployment. The problem is that behind the mild-sounding Democratic plank lies a horrendous proposal called the Humphrey - Hawkins Bill, which has become a keystone measure on Capitol Hill among a wide swath of Democrats.

Humphrey- Hawkins (named for its sponsors, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins of California), in essence proposes to repeal the business cycle and limit unemployment to 3 per cent by making the government the employer of last resort. The bill's sponsors don't bother filling in the details — that little matter is left to the White House.

It is estimated that Humphrey - Hawkins could increase the federal budget by around $45 billion. Persons employed in the private sector, if not satisfied with their wages, under the bill could quit their jobs and demand that Uncle Sam hire them at the highest prevailing wage rates for their specialties.

A common figure on Capitol Hill is that an estimated 10 million workers now making less than the highest wages in private jobs would become unemployed so they could go to work for the government.

In a year when major political candidates have fallen by the wayside because of their close ties to Washington, it seems incredible that such a bill as Humphrey-Hawkins could be riding as high as it now is. The bill is a monument to the power of special interest groups at the expense of the public as a whole. In this case, the groups pushing Humphrey- Hawkins hardest are labor leaders and blacks — abetted by many Democrats. Jimmy Carter himself is on record favoring one recent version of the bill, which has been amended over and over.

Although the nation's unemployment rate rose in June for the first time since September, its general trend is still clearly downward. It would be a tragedy of major proportions — unleashing an inflation rate seldom if ever seen in this country — to abort the current economic progress with anything akin to Humphrey- Hawkins.

Everyone wants a lower rate of unemployment. But no reasonable person wants to trade unemployment — especially an improving rate of unemployment — for blatant socialism.

Another Olympiad has been brought to birth. The last one nearly died when political activists tried to use the games for their own purposes and put a number of athletes in grave physical danger. The whole world was shocked, but reassured when the games continued as planned.

What was it caused the athletes to ignore their own danger and pursue the competitive tests of body and spirit? Was it a love of athletics for its own sake? Was it the financial obligations involved? Or was it that they saw in the Olympic Games the grand ideal of world unity which they would not see sabotaged by a few misguided hotheads?

Perhaps all three, but we believe it was predominantly the latter. What a triumph for good-neighborliness and good-naturedness the games continue to be! But they must be preserved as such by persistent goodwill. All kinds of selfish tensions can arise to spoil the ideal — the problem of what is professionalism and what amateur status, the problem of racial prejudice, the personality clashes that are inevitable. But the rules are strict and the standards high, not only morally but in fair play for all. May they ever remain so.

As for physical achievement, the contestants themselves push these up higher and higher, not only at the games but in the four-year intervals. There can be no better way.

We wish the games God's blessing. We pray for each partricipant God's strength and control. While we welcome that in the Charter of the Games it is laid down that no contestant may be disqualified for his or her color or politics, we feel equally glad that neither can they be disqualified for their religion. But we do know that no matter by what medium they come to God, all are sustained by Him whether they acknowledte it or not — and therefore we are all God's Children.

And we know that without God's help no athlete will be able to live up to the prayer of the great closing ceremony: "May they display cheerfulness and concord so that the Olympic torch may be carried on with even greater eagerness and honor for the good of humanity throughout the ages."

We are not pure spirits — our bodies exercise a tremendous effect upon the way we feel and therefore act. If bodies alone were determinant in the health of our spirits, athletes would have a head start over all of us. But we must remind them that one's spirit has a strong effect upon the strength of muscle, the beat of heart, the will to win.

May we also remind them that there are folk with ailing, crippled bodies whose spirit surges through them and rises above them in amazing manner. Not all feats of endurance are won on the race track: not all leaps of courage are seen over hurdles or in polevaulting. Many a leap of courage is made with a pen, many an endurance test is made on or beside a bed; many an act of sportsmanship comes when driving a car or in being a baby-sitter.

We know that these tasks do not look like achievements, but in the Olympic charter "the most important thing ... is not to win but to take part," and in the realm of the spirit all athletes can be winners.

Are they? It is possible to be a winner in one area of a contest — on the track, in the water or on the ski run— and yet be beaten in another area of life — in relationships, in habits, in morals. Yet these are also visible. In an Olympic contest "the gracefulness and sportsmanship of the contestant and the method of winning are esteemed equally with the victory itself."

In life's contest this is even more true. Training for life is a full-time task. No amateurs here! Are you a winner? Be honest, now! You can be a winner. Ask any Salvationist.

TIME FOR A HOUSE CLEANING

From News And Observer, Raleigh, N.C.

House members are in hot water because of the spreading Wayne Hays scandal. They have partially extricated themselves by moving quickly on some reforms of internal congressional spending rules. However, current Capitol Hill accounting literally invites trouble.

For example, House members can withdraw travel allowances in cash and need present no vouchers for these expenses. It was a system, by the way, devised by Hays. It has led to cases of double billing, and a return to a voucher system is warranted.

There also should be a check on who travels abroad with congressmen at taxpayers' expense. For instance, Hays reportedly took female companions on congressional journeys to the Caribbean. Procedure need not invade privacy. A simple requirement could be regular publication of the names and jobs of those who make trips with congressmen at public expense.

It is perhaps unrealistic to think that all wasteful patronage could be eliminated from Capitol Hill. But certainly House leaders can monitor payrolls to reduce padding. Again, Hays's former Administration Committee serves as a good example. Between 1971 and 1975, the panel's payroll grew from 30 to 260, of which Miss Elizabeth Ray was one.

Temptation for abuse could be reduced by tightening the $6500 stationery allowance, which can be withdrawn in a lump sum. Tax-paid trips to home districts also could be trimmed. Representatives now are allowed 26 annual visits. And there are minor perquisites such as a free footlocker a year that could be eliminated. There is, in short, plenty for Congress to reform. The sooner House leaders get started, the sooner they will begin to regain public confidence.

PROBLEM OF MONEY

The outlook for the nation's power consumers and the electric industry is outlined in an authoritative report entitled "Financing the Electric Utility Industry" prepared for the Edison Electric Institute. It is estimated that U.S. investor-owned electric utilities will need approximately $140 billion for capital investment from 1974 to 1980, and the U.S. electric industry is described as the single most capital-intensive industry in the American economy.

Traditionally, the securities of utility companies have been attractive to investors because the companies were stable, made good earnings and paid their dividends and interest. But, now that the nation's electric companies are faced with the greatest capital expenditures in their existence in order to meet both electric energy demand and environmental requirements, the attractiveness of utility securities for investment purposes is at an historic low. The reason is simple. Many utilities have experienced a marked decline in earnings as a result of sharply-increased fuel, interest and construction costs. According to the study, if we are to finance necessary electric utility expansion the problem "... will require a combination of public and private actions, ranging from rate increases to improved regulatory practices to managerial innovations to achieve a more economical and efficient use of electricity." There is no escaping the need for "... substantial increases in electric utility rates and the need for streamlining the decision-making procedures of many state regulatory commissions."

Capital-intensive industries supply the basic necessities for modertn life, including oil and electric energy. If an adequate supply of those necessities is to be maintained, they will have to increase in price. Allowing adequate rates for electric service, with resultant profit levels sufficient to attract investment funds, is the only way to expand the nation's electric energy supply and, in the long run, is the least expensive.

NO ONE IS ACCOUNTABLE

"What is happening in America is something that is foreign to the American way of life: a government presuming to know what is best for its people, at the expense of the people's freedom to make their own decisions. Moreover, it is doubly wrong when appointed officials exercise life-or-death power over the sources of people's jobs and income, without being held accountable for what happens when that power is used indiscriminately or unwisely. This has always been the nub of the problem with regulatory agencies."

P.S. TO THE NEWS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The spoeeches that placed the name of anti- abortionist Ellen McCormack in nomination for president at the Democratic National Convention make it clear that the Republican who has the best chance to defeat Jimmy Carter is Ronald Reagan.

The long string of successes by the Democratic Party since 1932 has been based on a coalition of southern Democrats, northern urban Catholics, ethnic groups, big labor, and the blacks – first glued together by the personality of Franklin D. Roosevelt. This working coalition enabled the Democrats to win seven presidential elections and control of Congress for 40 out of 44 years.

This coalition has now been deliberately fractured by Jimmy Carter. Those opposed to abortion feel frozen out of the Democratic Party and are searching for a a new home. They accuse Carter of deliberate deceit in getting the support of pro- life volunteers in the crucial Iowa primary, and then of repudiating his promises to those who helped him win his first northern victory.

The Ellen McCormack speakers accuse Carter of the arbitary exercise of power in personally forcing members of the Platform Committee to include a pro-abortion plank, in refusing to permit the issue to be debated by the full convention, and even in denying the McCormack supporters space for one card table of literature in the convention hall.

They point out that the Democratic platform carefully avoided offending those on both sides of other emotional issues, such as busing and the environment, but included a pro-abortion plank more radical even than the McGovern platform of four years ago.

The 1976 Democratic Party platform says that "it is undesirable to attempt to amend the U.S. Constitution to overturn the Supreme Court decision" on abortion. In 1857 the Democrats took a similar position in regard to the Dred Scott decision which held that a slave was the property of his owner.

Bad as that decision was, it did not kill anyone. The Supreme Court decision of January, 1973, was worse because it gave a mother the right to kill her unborn baby.

The decision of June, 1976, compounded this evil by denying all rights to the baby's father, holding, in effect, that the unborn baby is the property of the mother only.

Just as the Supreme Court decision on Dred Scott made our country face the moral issue of slavery, so the Supreme Court and the Democratic platform make us face the moral issue involved in the killing of a million innocent babies a year.

Jimmy Carter has thus cast out of the Democratic Party the millions of anti- abortion Democrats, including their influential clergy and articulate lay leaders such as the brilliant and beautiful back Protestant head of the Right to Life movement, Dr. Mildred Jefferson. The question is, which Republican candidate can gather the harvest of all those votes?

Gerald Ford is hopelessly precluded from reaping the benefit of these disaffected Democrats because he, like Carter, opposes the Human Life Amendment, and Mrs. Ford has said that the Supreme Court decision to legalize abortion was was "the best thing in the world ... a great, great decision."

Only Ronald Reagan, who stands against abortion and for the Human Life Amendment, can attract the support of the Democrats who have been morally offended and politically insulted by Carter. If the Republicans nominate Reagan, they have the opportunity to put together a coalition that can win in November.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

AT&T Record Scandal

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- American Telephone and Telegraph, the telephone colossus, has asserted the right to snoop into the personal records of its customers.

This startling claim was made in court testimony, which has been sealed. Company executives acknowledged behind closed doors that they had confiscated the long-distance records of a former employee.

"They were our records, and I wanted to see them," testified Chester Todd, the corporate official who sent for the records. The sealed testimony made clear that AT&T felt it also had proprietary rights to anyone else's telephone records. The company treated its erstwhile employee, according to the testimony, "like just any other customer."

This would seem to fly in the face of AT&T's proclaimed regulations, which specify that private phone records can be obtained only by court subpoena. Then the customer is supposed to be notified.

What AT&T proclaims in public and what it does in secret, however, don't necessarily coincide. This is apparent from the case of James Ashley, who was fired from his job as an assistant vice president for Southwestern Bell. After his abrupt departure, his telephone calls were inspected without subpoena and without notice.

AT&T, of course, pulls the corporate strings, which operate the vast Bell system. Ashley claimed he was fired by Bell for refusing to participate in its political corruption. He swore that he had been compelled to donate $50 per month to an illegal political slush fund.

Bell executives were also required, he said to make other regular cash contributions to the slush fund. Afterward, the executives recovered the money by submitting false vouchers, he charged.

Another Bell executive, T.O. Gravitt, allegedly was driven by his conscience to kill himself over the internal corruption. He left a suicide note charging that "Watergate is a gnat compared to the Bell system." Both Ashley and Gravitt's widow are now suing Southwestern Bell.

According to the sealed testimony, three company officials admitted that they had seized Ashley's long-distance records. "All the records were sent to me," testified Todd. "I finally sent them to the legal department."

It was acknowledged that Southwestern Bell's lawyers could determine from he2 records whom Ashley had been calling --information that culd be used to fight his lawsuit. But a company official swore that Ashley's records were confiscated merely to check on his telephone charges.

Footnote: A spokesman told us that AT&T feels Ashley's telephone records belonged to the company. He denied that the records were used to investigate Ashley.

White House Chaos: White House operations have been reduced to a state of controlled chaos, according to sources on the inside. The prevailing confusion can be blamed, in part, on the frantic effort to keep Gerald Ford in the White House.

But the problem has its roots, our sources suggest, in the transition days when President Ford's team took over from the Nixon guard. Ford "overreacted" to the rigid, highly structured Nixon methods.

In contrast, Ford's approach was loose, casual, easy going. At first, the new President directed the operation himself. It was part of his learning process. But now that he has a better grasp of the job, he leaves the routine decisions to the staff while he concentrates on the larger policy problems.

This has left the staff more on its own. The result, according to one insider, is that "a lot of people have been going around in different directions." The footloose presidential aides usually wind up attending conferences. "It seems like all we do is go to meetings," complained a White House aide.

"There is a maximum of discussion and a minimum of implementation," echoed another. Top Republicans on Capitol Hill have also griped to us that they can't get through. "You call over to the White House," grumped one, "and everybody is always in a meeting. When I asked some of those guys what they do, they just mumble a vague reply."

Other insiders contend that there is bound to be some disgruntlement and confusion in any organization. They acknowledge that staff chief Richard Cheney doesn't keep as tight a control as his predecessor, Donald Rumsfeld, did before moving into the Pentagon as Secretary of Defense.

"There are a lot of end runs around Cheney," said one source. But others praised Cheney. "He is a tremendously talented guy," said one.

Meanwhile, there are still a few White House chickens running around as if they had lost their heads.

Blood Brother: The Six Indian Nations, better known as the Iroquois, have maintained their freedom from the United States over the past two centuries. In many respects, they are still recognized by the United States as a semi-independent nation in the fastnesses of upper New York State.

Now as a gesture of friendship to the white nation that has changed their land, the Iroquois want to make a descendant of a signer of the Declaration of Independence a "blood brother" in the Six Nations. The honor is accorded one person each year.

$100 Million Campaign? Bidding For Carter Is High By Both Feuding Sides Inside 'United' Labor

WASHINGTON — If this is labor chieftain George Meany's last hurrah, it will be loud. It will tinkle with coin. It will be filled with the whir of the "movement's" 24-hour-a-day computers. It will jingle with hundreds of millions of phone calls.

It will crackle with the high-speed Big Vote Machine known as labor's COPE. And this will mean the pouring of what has been estimated as high as $100 million onto the congressional and presidential campaign front. For the Democrats.

Meany never whimpers. He fought for Scoop Jackson. He got Jimmy Carter. And what Carter gets depends, and you can believe it, on the deals the Georgian is willing to make with the labor chiefs. Meany can still shut off the cash-flow and much of the manpower. Don't count the "old man" out.

Just one qualification here, please. If Ronnie Reagan gets the Republican nomination, he'll be hit by "a holy crusade" such as labor never before has whipped up.

With Carter's luck, Reagan, hated by the massive labor alliance, united for the first time in its history, will grab the Kansas City grail.

But if it's Jerry Ford, many powerful unions will just go through the motions. The strategy, friends, is to keep Carter from "winning big."

That's how some high AFL-CIO Executive Council members see it. They had a pleasant downbeat session behind closed doors last Monday morning. Meany was not well. He was drawn and in pain. But he was as sharp as an old-fashioned strop razor. He wanted to delay the endorsement of Carter to Aug. 31, when the 152-member AFL-CIO General Board will meet at the Shoreham-Americana here.

Who knows why? Those fully trusted by Meany would leave a phone booth half empty. He might have been waiting for a possible Nelson Rockefeller miracle. The Vice President is one of Meany's intimates.

Or Meany might have wanted to bargain longer with Carter. Today only the AFL-CIO Maritime Trades Department, led by seafarers' Paul Hall with the Marine Engineers' Beneficial Assn. president Jesse Calhoon running interference, has Carter committed. On paper, too. Big shipbuilding and American ocean freight-hauling program.

They're pragmatists. They would have gone for their old friend Jerry Ford. But he vetoed them away.

And five or six building trades leaders sitting around that Executive Council table actually wanted Ford. But he vetoed them out too, by killing extended common situs picketing. There were many sighs after the council session which bridged these traditional Republicans. And Carter hasn't really made them any definitive promises.

Meany is construction-oriented. So, though he had no place to go politically, he wasn't about to rush into Carter's arms.

But the season's newest star, 56-year-old Glenn Watts, president of the 475,000-member Communications Workers of America, asked Meany why wait six weeks? Why not endorse Carter right now?

Watts is the sudden voice of what's known as Labor's Coalition Clearing House. He's the man pushing for merger of the 14.5-million-member AFL-CIO and the 1.4-million-member United Auto Workers.

In his quite way he's a one-man whirlwind. Activist in Common Cause. Newest member of the Ford Foundation's board of trustees. Lots of other listings. And they say he's looking to add one, namely president of the AFL-CIO.

And he's on the jam-packed "ground floor" of the Carter establishment.

In this lies the full significance of the most toned-down struggle inside labor today. Power is where power lies. And that power for labor is in the White House Oval Office. Much will depend on the labor chief for whom the next President of the U.S. reaches out.

Always it has been Meany—even during the Rooseveltian days when Meany was the AFL's second officer and there was a powerful, colorfully-led competitive CIO.

So, is this Meany's last hurrah? Is it because the 81-year-old chief has been hospitalized? Or is it because of the inner feud which lies just below the surface?

There's no doubt the Glenn Watts forces inside the AFL-CIO, bolstered by the auto workers union, if it merges, and the United Mine Workers, should it also come in, would have a powerful bloc of votes if Meany retires.

So the elbowing isn't for Jimmy Carter's smile alone. It's for the open door of the Oval Office and the power therein.

Thus there is an inner dispute over who will work with the new overall "advisory" committee of Carter's in Washington. And who will liaison with the powers that be in the committee for the election of a President headquartered down in Atlanta.

Meanwhile, the labor money and manpower will pour out. For the Democratic ticket. He's a lucky man, that Carter. The bidding is high.

DON'T TRADE UNEMPLOYMENT FOR SOCIALISM

Now that the Democratic National Convention is in the history books, it is a good time to take a hard look at a major plank of that party's platform that could be devastating if it becomes national policy. The plan calls for a reduction of the adult unemployment rate to 3 per cent within four years.

On its face, that goal is laudable enough. No one likes unemployment. The problem is that behind the mild-sounding Democratic plank lies a horrendous proposal called the Humphrey - Hawkins Bill, which has become a keystone measure on Capitol Hill among a wide swath of Democrats.

Humphrey- Hawkins (named for its sponsors, Sen. Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota and Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins of California), in essence proposes to repeal the business cycle and limit unemployment to 3 per cent by making the government the employer of last resort. The bill's sponsors don't bother filling in the details — that little matter is left to the White House.

It is estimated that Humphrey - Hawkins could increase the federal budget by around $45 billion. Persons employed in the private sector, if not satisfied with their wages, under the bill could quit their jobs and demand that Uncle Sam hire them at the highest prevailing wage rates for their specialties.

A common figure on Capitol Hill is that an estimated 10 million workers now making less than the highest wages in private jobs would become unemployed so they could go to work for the government.

In a year when major political candidates have fallen by the wayside because of their close ties to Washington, it seems incredible that such a bill as Humphrey-Hawkins could be riding as high as it now is. The bill is a monument to the power of special interest groups at the expense of the public as a whole. In this case, the groups pushing Humphrey- Hawkins hardest are labor leaders and blacks — abetted by many Democrats. Jimmy Carter himself is on record favoring one recent version of the bill, which has been amended over and over.

Although the nation's unemployment rate rose in June for the first time since September, its general trend is still clearly downward. It would be a tragedy of major proportions — unleashing an inflation rate seldom if ever seen in this country — to abort the current economic progress with anything akin to Humphrey- Hawkins.

Everyone wants a lower rate of unemployment. But no reasonable person wants to trade unemployment — especially an improving rate of unemployment — for blatant socialism.

Another Olympiad has been brought to birth. The last one nearly died when political activists tried to use the games for their own purposes and put a number of athletes in grave physical danger. The whole world was shocked, but reassured when the games continued as planned.

What was it caused the athletes to ignore their own danger and pursue the competitive tests of body and spirit? Was it a love of athletics for its own sake? Was it the financial obligations involved? Or was it that they saw in the Olympic Games the grand ideal of world unity which they would not see sabotaged by a few misguided hotheads?

Perhaps all three, but we believe it was predominantly the latter. What a triumph for good-neighborliness and good-naturedness the games continue to be! But they must be preserved as such by persistent goodwill. All kinds of selfish tensions can arise to spoil the ideal — the problem of what is professionalism and what amateur status, the problem of racial prejudice, the personality clashes that are inevitable. But the rules are strict and the standards high, not only morally but in fair play for all. May they ever remain so.

As for physical achievement, the contestants themselves push these up higher and higher, not only at the games but in the four-year intervals. There can be no better way.

We wish the games God's blessing. We pray for each partricipant God's strength and control. While we welcome that in the Charter of the Games it is laid down that no contestant may be disqualified for his or her color or politics, we feel equally glad that neither can they be disqualified for their religion. But we do know that no matter by what medium they come to God, all are sustained by Him whether they acknowledte it or not — and therefore we are all God's Children.

And we know that without God's help no athlete will be able to live up to the prayer of the great closing ceremony: "May they display cheerfulness and concord so that the Olympic torch may be carried on with even greater eagerness and honor for the good of humanity throughout the ages."

We are not pure spirits — our bodies exercise a tremendous effect upon the way we feel and therefore act. If bodies alone were determinant in the health of our spirits, athletes would have a head start over all of us. But we must remind them that one's spirit has a strong effect upon the strength of muscle, the beat of heart, the will to win.

May we also remind them that there are folk with ailing, crippled bodies whose spirit surges through them and rises above them in amazing manner. Not all feats of endurance are won on the race track: not all leaps of courage are seen over hurdles or in polevaulting. Many a leap of courage is made with a pen, many an endurance test is made on or beside a bed; many an act of sportsmanship comes when driving a car or in being a baby-sitter.

We know that these tasks do not look like achievements, but in the Olympic charter "the most important thing ... is not to win but to take part," and in the realm of the spirit all athletes can be winners.

Are they? It is possible to be a winner in one area of a contest — on the track, in the water or on the ski run— and yet be beaten in another area of life — in relationships, in habits, in morals. Yet these are also visible. In an Olympic contest "the gracefulness and sportsmanship of the contestant and the method of winning are esteemed equally with the victory itself."

In life's contest this is even more true. Training for life is a full-time task. No amateurs here! Are you a winner? Be honest, now! You can be a winner. Ask any Salvationist.

TIME FOR A HOUSE CLEANING
From News And Observer, Raleigh, N.C.

House members are in hot water because of the spreading Wayne Hays scandal. They have partially extricated themselves by moving quickly on some reforms of internal congressional spending rules. However, current Capitol Hill accounting literally invites trouble.

For example, House members can withdraw travel allowances in cash and need present no vouchers for these expenses. It was a system, by the way, devised by Hays. It has led to cases of double billing, and a return to a voucher system is warranted.

There also should be a check on who travels abroad with congressmen at taxpayers' expense. For instance, Hays reportedly took female companions on congressional journeys to the Caribbean. Procedure need not invade privacy. A simple requirement could be regular publication of the names and jobs of those who make trips with congressmen at public expense.

It is perhaps unrealistic to think that all wasteful patronage could be eliminated from Capitol Hill. But certainly House leaders can monitor payrolls to reduce padding. Again, Hays's former Administration Committee serves as a good example. Between 1971 and 1975, the panel's payroll grew from 30 to 260, of which Miss Elizabeth Ray was one.

Temptation for abuse could be reduced by tightening the $6500 stationery allowance, which can be withdrawn in a lump sum. Tax-paid trips to home districts also could be trimmed. Representatives now are allowed 26 annual visits. And there are minor perquisites such as a free footlocker a year that could be eliminated. There is, in short, plenty for Congress to reform. The sooner House leaders get started, the sooner they will begin to regain public confidence.

PROBLEM OF MONEY

The outlook for the nation's power consumers and the electric industry is outlined in an authoritative report entitled "Financing the Electric Utility Industry" prepared for the Edison Electric Institute. It is estimated that U.S. investor-owned electric utilities will need approximately $140 billion for capital investment from 1974 to 1980, and the U.S. electric industry is described as the single most capital-intensive industry in the American economy.

Traditionally, the securities of utility companies have been attractive to investors because the companies were stable, made good earnings and paid their dividends and interest. But, now that the nation's electric companies are faced with the greatest capital expenditures in their existence in order to meet both electric energy demand and environmental requirements, the attractiveness of utility securities for investment purposes is at an historic low. The reason is simple. Many utilities have experienced a marked decline in earnings as a result of sharply-increased fuel, interest and construction costs. According to the study, if we are to finance necessary electric utility expansion the problem "... will require a combination of public and private actions, ranging from rate increases to improved regulatory practices to managerial innovations to achieve a more economical and efficient use of electricity." There is no escaping the need for "... substantial increases in electric utility rates and the need for streamlining the decision-making procedures of many state regulatory commissions."

Capital-intensive industries supply the basic necessities for modertn life, including oil and electric energy. If an adequate supply of those necessities is to be maintained, they will have to increase in price. Allowing adequate rates for electric service, with resultant profit levels sufficient to attract investment funds, is the only way to expand the nation's electric energy supply and, in the long run, is the least expensive.

NO ONE IS ACCOUNTABLE

"What is happening in America is something that is foreign to the American way of life: a government presuming to know what is best for its people, at the expense of the people's freedom to make their own decisions. P.S. TO THE NEWS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

The spoeeches that placed the name of anti- abortionist Ellen McCormack in nomination for president at the Democratic National Convention make it clear that the Republican who has the best chance to defeat Jimmy Carter is Ronald Reagan.

The long string of successes by the Democratic Party since 1932 has been based on a coalition of southern Democrats, northern urban Catholics, ethnic groups, big labor, and the blacks – first glued together by the personality of Franklin D. Roosevelt. This working coalition enabled the Democrats to win seven presidential elections and control of Congress for 40 out of 44 years.

This coalition has now been deliberately fractured by Jimmy Carter. Those opposed to abortion feel frozen out of the Democratic Party and are searching for a a new home. They accuse Carter of deliberate deceit in getting the support of pro- life volunteers in the crucial Iowa primary, and then of repudiating his promises to those who helped him win his first northern victory.

The Ellen McCormack speakers accuse Carter of the arbitary exercise of power in personally forcing members of the Platform Committee to include a pro-abortion plank, in refusing to permit the issue to be debated by the full convention, and even in denying the McCormack supporters space for one card table of literature in the convention hall.

They point out that the Democratic platform carefully avoided offending those on both sides of other emotional issues, such as busing and the environment, but included a pro-abortion plank more radical even than the McGovern platform of four years ago.

The 1976 Democratic Party platform says that "it is undesirable to attempt to amend the U.S. Constitution to overturn the Supreme Court decision" on abortion. In 1857 the Democrats took a similar position in regard to the Dred Scott decision which held that a slave was the property of his owner.

Bad as that decision was, it did not kill anyone. The Supreme Court decision of January, 1973, was worse because it gave a mother the right to kill her unborn baby.

The decision of June, 1976, compounded this evil by denying all rights to the baby's father, holding, in effect, that the unborn baby is the property of the mother only.

Just as the Supreme Court decision on Dred Scott made our country face the moral issue of slavery, so the Supreme Court and the Democratic platform make us face the moral issue involved in the killing of a million innocent babies a year.

Jimmy Carter has thus cast out of the Democratic Party the millions of anti- abortion Democrats, including their influential clergy and articulate lay leaders such as the brilliant and beautiful back Protestant head of the Right to Life movement, Dr. Mildred Jefferson. The question is, which Republican candidate can gather the harvest of all those votes?

Gerald Ford is hopelessly precluded from reaping the benefit of these disaffected Democrats because he, like Carter, opposes the Human Life Amendment, and Mrs. Ford has said that the Supreme Court decision to legalize abortion was was "the best thing in the world ... a great, great decision."

Only Ronald Reagan, who stands against abortion and for the Human Life Amendment, can attract the support of the Democrats who have been morally offended and politically insulted by Carter. If the Republicans nominate Reagan, they have the opportunity to put together a coalition that can win in November.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

AT&T Record Scandal

By Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- American Telephone and Telegraph, the telephone colossus, has asserted the right to snoop into the personal records of its customers.

This startling claim was made in court testimony, which has been sealed. Company executives acknowledged behind closed doors that they had confiscated the long-distance records of a former employee.

"They were our records, and I wanted to see them," testified Chester Todd, the corporate official who sent for the records. The sealed testimony made clear that AT&T felt it also had proprietary rights to anyone else's telephone records. The company treated its erstwhile employee, according to the testimony, "like just any other customer."

This would seem to fly in the face of AT&T's proclaimed regulations, which specify that private phone records can be obtained only by court subpoena. Then the customer is supposed to be notified.

What AT&T proclaims in public and what it does in secret, however, don't necessarily coincide. This is apparent from the case of James Ashley, who was fired from his job as an assistant vice president for Southwestern Bell. After his abrupt departure, his telephone calls were inspected without subpoena and without notice.

AT&T, of course, pulls the corporate strings, which operate the vast Bell system. Ashley claimed he was fired by Bell for refusing to participate in its political corruption. He swore that he had been compelled to donate $50 per month to an illegal political slush fund.

Bell executives were also required, he said to make other regular cash contributions to the slush fund. Afterward, the executives recovered the money by submitting false vouchers, he charged.

Another Bell executive, T.O. Gravitt, allegedly was driven by his conscience to kill himself over the internal corruption. He left a suicide note charging that "Watergate is a gnat compared to the Bell system." Both Ashley and Gravitt's widow are now suing Southwestern Bell.

According to the sealed testimony, three company officials admitted that they had seized Ashley's long-distance records. "All the records were sent to me," testified Todd. "I finally sent them to the legal department."

It was acknowledged that Southwestern Bell's lawyers could determine from he2 records whom Ashley had been calling --information that culd be used to fight his lawsuit. But a company official swore that Ashley's records were confiscated merely to check on his telephone charges.

Footnote: A spokesman told us that AT&T feels Ashley's telephone records belonged to the company. He denied that the records were used to investigate Ashley.

White House Chaos: White House operations have been reduced to a state of controlled chaos, according to sources on the inside. The prevailing confusion can be blamed, in part, on the frantic effort to keep Gerald Ford in the White House.

But the problem has its roots, our sources suggest, in the transition days when President Ford's team took over from the Nixon guard. Ford "overreacted" to the rigid, highly structured Nixon methods.

In contrast, Ford's approach was loose, casual, easy going. At first, the new President directed the operation himself. It was part of his learning process. But now that he has a better grasp of the job, he leaves the routine decisions to the staff while he concentrates on the larger policy problems.

This has left the staff more on its own. The result, according to one insider, is that "a lot of people have been going around in different directions." The footloose presidential aides usually wind up attending conferences. "It seems like all we do is go to meetings," complained a White House aide.

"There is a maximum of discussion and a minimum of implementation," echoed another. Top Republicans on Capitol Hill have also griped to us that they can't get through. "You call over to the White House," grumped one, "and everybody is always in a meeting. When I asked some of those guys what they do, they just mumble a vague reply."

Other insiders contend that there is bound to be some disgruntlement and confusion in any organization. They acknowledge that staff chief Richard Cheney doesn't keep as tight a control as his predecessor, Donald Rumsfeld, did before moving into the Pentagon as Secretary of Defense.

"There are a lot of end runs around Cheney," said one source. But others praised Cheney. "He is a tremendously talented guy," said one.

Meanwhile, there are still a few White House chickens running around as if they had lost their heads.

Blood Brother: The Six Indian Nations, better known as the Iroquois, have maintained their freedom from the United States over the past two centuries. In many respects, they are still recognized by the United States as a semi-independent nation in the fastnesses of upper New York State.

Now as a gesture of friendship to the white nation that has changed their land, the Iroquois want to make a descendant of a signer of the Declaration of Independence a "blood brother" in the Six Nations. The honor is accorded one person each year.

$100 Million Campaign? Bidding For Carter Is High By Both Feuding Sides Inside 'United' Labor

WASHINGTON — If this is labor chieftain George Meany's last hurrah, it will be loud. It will tinkle with coin. It will be filled with the whir of the "movement's" 24-hour-a-day computers. It will jingle with hundreds of millions of phone calls.

It will crackle with the high-speed Big Vote Machine known as labor's COPE. And this will mean the pouring of what has been estimated as high as $100 million onto the congressional and presidential campaign front. For the Democrats.

Meany never whimpers. He fought for Scoop Jackson. He got Jimmy Carter. And what Carter gets depends, and you can believe it, on the deals the Georgian is willing to make with the labor chiefs. Meany can still shut off the cash-flow and much of the manpower. Don't count the "old man" out.

Worst earthquake in twelve years hits China

TOKYO (AP) — A strong new earth tremor jolted northeastern China today after the world's most powerful quake in 12 years struck the region before dawn, causing heavy damage and probably many casualties in the coastal metropolis of Tientsin.

The Italian news agency ANSA said the new tremor was felt in the Chinese capital of Peking at 6:50 p.m. (6:50 a.m. EDT) and sent residents into the streets for safety. There was no immediate word of casualties or damage.

The U.S. Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., recorded the magnitude of the aftershock at 7.9 on the Richter scale, almost as strong as the overnight quake and capable of massive damage.

The original quake, recorded by the Denver center at 8.2 on the Richter scale, also shook Peking. At least several major buildings were reported damaged there.

Former Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam, who was visiting Tientsin with his wife, said the Chinese told him after the first quake that there were fatalities in that city but that they did not know the precise number, the Italian news agency reported.

"It is something certainly very serious," Whitlam was quoted as saying. He said he saw buildings collapse and "fold down like accordions" in Tientsin, a city of four million people.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. quoted the Japanese embassy in Peking as saying one Japanese employe was reported killed and six persons injured in the first quake at a Japanese manufacturing plant in Tangshan, an industrial area near Tientsin.

ANSA quoted Chinese authorities as saying the quake struck without warning. The Chinese recently had been able to predict some earthquakes.

The Chinese foreign ministry told the Australian embassy the epicenter of the first quake was about 90 miles east-southeast of Peking and 40 miles north of Tientsin, the capital of Hopeh province.

Among the badly damaged buildings in Peking were the Hsin Hsiao Hotel, the old wing of the Peking Hotel, buildings in the embassies quarter, a wing of the railway station and a large department store in the center of the city, Ansa reported.

Whitlam said many buildings in Tientsin, including his hotel, were heavily damaged. He said he saw Chinese searching through mounds of debris.

Whitlam said he and his wife were asleep on the seventh floor of their hotel, Tientsin's tallest building, when it "broke literally in two." He said the Chinese helped all those in the hotel to safety.

Tientsin's foreign community of about 70 persons were all reported in good condition and took refuge at the international club outside the city, Whitlam said.

Kyodo, the Japanese news agency, reported from Peking that the epicenter was believed to be near Tangshan, an industrial center that produces steel and electrical machinery.

Peking, the Chinese capital, was jolted for half a minute by the first severe shock, and aftershocks continued into the morning. Chinese and foreigners spent the rest of the night outdoors although it was raining, but diplomats said major damage was not apparent, and there was no indication of casualties in the capital.

No word of damage or casualties outside Peking came from the Chinese government or from Hsinhua, the offical news agency. In Washington, the U.S. Geological Survey said many people may have been trapped in buildings that collapsed. A member of the agency's staff who recently headed a mission to China said the Chinese have made significant advances in predicting quakes, and advance warning may have been given. But no such warning was reported in Peking.

David Dean, deputy chief of the U.S. diplomatic mission in Peking, said all members of the U.S. Mission and other Americans known to be in Peking were safe. Those living in high-rise apartment houses and hotels were urged to move to the mission, where mission chief Thomas Gates, who took up his post in May, was supervising operations.

Ansa reported piles of debris at the entrances of old buildings, but it said Peking's ancient quarter apparently withstood the tremors. Everything appeared normal in front of the residence of Communist party Chairman Mao Tse-tung and other public buildings, it said.

"Despite the intensity of the quake, there was no real panic," said an Australian diplomat.

Electricity was cut off at a hotel for foreigners, and guests in bathrobes and pajamas milled about in front of the building, Kyodo reported. The main streets were crowded, and frightened people could be heard screaming for help from their windows.

The quake today was the largest recorded by the U.S. Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., since the Alaska quake on March 27, 1964, registered 8.4 on the Richter scale. It caused widespread damage and killed 131 persons.

"With the size of this one, damage would be expected," said Leroy Irby, a geophysicist at Golden.

The open-ended Richter scale records ground movement, and an increase of one whole number means a 10-fold increase in the quake's force. A quake registering 7 is considered a major one capable of widespread, heavy damage, while a reading of 8 means a "great" quake capable of causing tremendous damage. The San Franciso quake of 1906 registered 8.3.

McCarthy for president starts legal battle in Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — An attorney general's opinion saying marverick presidential candidate Eugene McCarthy should not be included on the Missouri general election ballot and agreement by the secretary of state to follow that advice has set the stage for a legal battle over state election laws.

"The law is unclear for independent candidates," said Marlene Barrett, McCarthy's Missouri coordinator and running mate, after the opinion was issued Tuesday.

"Perhaps our suit will help clarify the law and allow former Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy his rightful place on the Missouri ballot in November," she said.

McCarthy supporters have been circulating petitions for several months seeking to qualify his name as an independent candidate, unassociated with any organized party, on the Nov. 2 ballot. They plan to submit those petitions Saturday.

But Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick said in view of the attorney general's opinion, his office would probably not accept them.

"I don't see how we can," Kirkpatrick said. "We asked the attorney general for his opinion and it's incumbent now on us to rely on his opinion."

Mrs. Barrett said a suit would probably be filed early next week.

Atty. Gen. John Danforth said in his opinion, which carries no legal or judicial weight, that state law requires petitions for independent candidate nominations to have been submitted no later than April 27.

The deadline Saturday, Danforth said, applies only for petitions seeking establishment of ballot status for candidates of new political parties, the concept McCarthy and his supporters are opposing.

"McCarthy left the political parties because of the party politics involved and he felt he could avoid that by running as an independent," said spokesman Gary DeCarolis. McCarthy, former Democratic senator from Minnesota, left the party following his unsuccessful bid for the presidential nomination at the riot-marred 1968 Chicago convention.

But Danforth said that in speaking with McCarthy supporters Tuesday he advised them that his office would cooperate completely in any lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the election provisions.

"We are aware that an argument can be made that requiring independent candidates to file by the last Tuesday of April preceding the primary election is unconstitutional," the opinion said. "However, we are without authority to determine whether the statutes we have relied on in reaching our conslusion are constitutional."

Danforth said the role of his office is "to defend the statutes. I've got to call them the way I see them. The role of the attorney general is to interpret the statutes the way he finds them."

Bond to head Midwest Governors

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The Midwestern Govenors Conference has named Gov. Christopher S. Bond of Missouri as its chairman for the coming year.

Election is almost automatic since Bond, a Republican, is this year's vice chairman, who traditionally becomes chairman. A governor of the opposite party then becomes vice chairman.

Quake fails to register at St. Louis U.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The huge earthquake that rocked China Tuesday was so large that it could not be registered at the St. Louis University seismic data center, a spokesman said.

The quake, which reportedly hit 8.2 on the open-ended Richter Scale, ran off the scale at the university center, said Robert B. Herrmann, asistant professor in the Department of Earth and Atmospheric Sciences.

"We don't have anything calibrated that high," he said. "It knocked most of the instruments right off the paper.

"We are interested in local earthquakes, the tiny ones. So when a big one comes along, it knocks things off."

Hermann said the Chinese quake, which occurred at 2:43 p. m. St. Louis time, continued to send shocks around the world throughout the evening.

Worst earthquake in twelve years hits China

TOKYO (AP) — A strong new earth tremor jolted northeastern China today after the world's most powerful quake in 12 years struck the region before dawn, causing heavy damage and probably many casualties in the coastal metropolis of Tientsin.

The Italian news agency ANSA said the new tremor was felt in the Chinese capital of Peking at 6:50 p.m. (6:50 a.m. EDT) and sent residents into the streets for safety. There was no immediate word of casualties or damage.

The U.S. Earthquake Information Service in Golden, Colo., recorded the magnitude of the aftershock at 7.9 on the Richter scale, almost as strong as the overnight quake and capable of massive damage.

The original quake, recorded by the Denver center at 8.2 on the Richter scale, also shook Peking. At least several major buildings were reported damaged there.

Former Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam, who was visiting Tientsin with his wife, said the Chinese told him after the first quake that there were fatalities in that city but that they did not know the precise number, the Italian news agency reported.

"It is something certainly very serious," Whitlam was quoted as saying. He said he saw buildings collapse and "fold down like accordions" in Tientsin, a city of four million people.

The Japan Broadcasting Corp. quoted the Japanese embassy in Peking as saying one Japanese employe was reported killed and six persons injured in the first quake at a Japanese manufacturing plant in Tangshan, an industrial area near Tientsin.

ANSA quoted Chinese authorities as saying the quake struck without warning. The Chinese recently had been able to predict some earthquakes.

The Chinese foreign ministry told the Australian embassy the epicenter of the first quake was about 90 miles east-southeast of Peking and 40 miles north of Tientsin, the capital of Hopeh province.

Among the badly damaged buildings in Peking were the Hsin Hsiao Hotel, the old wing of the Peking Hotel, buildings in the embassies quarter, a wing of the railway station and a large department store in the center of the city, Ansa reported.

Whitlam said many buildings in Tientsin, including his hotel, were heavily damaged. He said he saw Chinese searching through mounds of debris.

Whitlam said he and his wife were asleep on the seventh floor of their hotel, Tientsin's tallest building, when it "broke literally in two." He said the Chinese helped all those in the hotel to safety.

Tientsin's foreign community of about 70 persons were all reported in good condition and took refuge at the international club outside the city, Whitlam said.

Stacy pays a visit to Sheriff Ames

By CHERIE BLANTON

This is the fourth installment of a novel, "Sticks and Stones May Break Your Bones," written by Cherie Blanton. The installments appear in the paper every Wednesday.

SUMMARY

Troy and Louise arrive at Rainbow's End where they are greeted by her sisters Jo and Sam and by the old caretaker Amos. Their homecoming is not as happy as it could have been, because the others have just discovered someone has killed some of their new calves.

At the same time Troy is learning of all this, her other sister Stacy, and Bertha, cook and wife of Amos, are on their way to town, where Stacy is preparing to go to the Sheriff and tell him of some of the strange events that are taking place at the old homestead.

Sheriff Ames, young and recently elected, is very upset at the thought that someone is harassing the harmless old ladies and the aged couple who live with them, by killing their livestock, setting fire to their tobacco barn and other such harassments. Remembering Miss Jo when she was his Sunday School teacher, he vows to accept the challenge of this, his first real case, and solve it.

Timid by Nature anyway, the thought of facing the Sheriff and relating the series of events which had led up to this meeting were almost more than she could bear, but Jo had insisted, and when Jo gave an order most people obeyed. Her hands fluttering over her hair to check that each strand was properly in place, and nervously wetting her lips, she heaved yet another great sigh along with a small prayer and stepped over the threshold of the building. Walking out of the bright sunlight and into the darker interior of the office caused her to stop a minute while her eyes adjusted themselves to the different light.

A chair scraped backwards, and Sheriff Ames, a tall, rugged looking young man came forward with his hand outstretched. "Why Miss Stacy, what on earth brings you into town on such a hot morning, not that I'm not pleased to see you." and he smiled that sweet smile which always made the ladies hearts flutter, and which had been such a vote getter for him when campaigning against Higgins for his office.

Stacy found herself thinking no wonder they made him Sheriff. He looks just like you would think an Angel of the Lord should, and then remembering some of the not so angelic stunts he had pulled when Jo taught him, she smiled also.

"Michael Ames, everytime I see you I think you've grown another inch." She arched her eyebrows and coyly continued, "My, how handsome you do look in that uniform. Poor Mr. Higgins, once you came on the scene with those big blue eyes he just never stood a chance now did he?"

"Handsome is as handsome does is what your sister used to tell me." He laughed aloud remembering, "I think Miss Jo thought I was pretty ugly most of the time.---But see here Miss Stacy, I know it wasn't for a look at me in my new uniform that you came today, now was it?"

"No Michael. There have been some strange things happening out at the farm and Jo thought perhaps we'd better come in and report them to you."

"What kind of things?" and taking her arm he guided her to a chair across the desk from him.

They sat for a moment in silence, only the whirring of the electric fan breaking the stillness, then Stacy cleared her throat and began to speak.

"I hardly know where to begin,---I guess at the beginning would be best wouldn't it?" She paused a moment, thought about what she had just said and smiled, "See, I'm sounding like a stupid idiot already."

"No you're not," he reassured her, "you just sound like someone who's very upset, and I think you're right--why not begin at the beginning."

"Well," she started, "about four months ago when Jo and Amos went out to the south pasture to check on the cattle one morning, they found a piece of the fence knocked down and most of the cattle strayed."

He smiled, "You know cattle, they're forever knocking down fences. What's that old saying, 'grass is always greener on the other side of the fence?"

"We thought that too." answered Stacy. "Amos came back to the house and got some tools to fix the fence with. Sam and I went back out with him to help Jo round up the cattle and put them back in while Amos repaired the damage that had been done; then we all went back to one of Bertha's good lunches and promptly dismissed the whole incident from our minds." She began to nervously twist a new looking ring she was wearing on her left hand, "You see Michael, the trouble is we've had to go out now at least once every two weeks to repair that fence. Last month we even moved the cattle to another pasture."

"And?" cried Michael now becoming more interested.

"The same thing. Poor Amos, I'm sure he repairs fences in his sleep at night." She frowned, "That's not all though. About two months ago,---wait, I know the exact date, because it was the day of the pig judging at the county seat and Bertha was planning on taking Sadie to show. She's so proud of that animal. The old sow that had her took a terrible dislike to the piglet and refused to feed her. Bertha wouldn't let Amos destroy her like he wanted to, instead she took her into their home and fed her day and night with a bottle, and now you should see her. It's so funny, Sadie thinks Bertha is her mama and follows her everywhere she can and Bertha is so enormous--well they really are sot of alike." She paused thinking of the strange sight the two of them made as they walked around the farm yard.

"What happened the day of the pig contest Miss Stacy?"

"Oh, see how I ramble? I do wish Jo had come and talked to you, she's really the one to tell you and she wouldn't have made such a dumb job of it."

"Nonsense," he consoled her, "You're doing just fine--now let's see, the day of the----"

"Yes, that night Bertha couldn't sleep well because she was so excited about Sadie being judged, so, at about three in the morning she got out of bed and went out to the hog lot to check on her pig. On the way there she looked across the fields and noticed the sky getting light. She said at first she didn't think anything of it, and then she suddenly realized three a.m. was too early in the morning for dawn to be breaking, so she ran back for Amos and hollered for us, and we got to the tobacco barn just as it was starting to catch fire good."

"I didn't know there had been a fire out your way. Didn't anyone report it?"

"No, Amos and Jo grabbed up some heavy horse blankets to smother the worst of it with, and the rest of us managed to extinguish the small blazes. We saved the barn, and except for now needing a new roof it's in pretty good condition."

"What do you think started the fire?"

"I don't know, and Amos won't say anything. Lately he just prowls around the place at all hours, and I've noticed dad's old shotgun is missing off it's rack in the study. I think Amos has taken it, though I don't dare ask for he looks so forbidding all the time now."

"Has there been anything else?"

"Yes, today was the worst of all. Jo loves the cattle and each calf that's born she takes such a personal interest in she can hardly bear to sell it when it's grown. That's what makes it so mean and so horrible."

"What Miss Stacy, what?"

"The calves. Amos and Jo got out early each morning when they know several of the cows are due to deliver, just to check on things and to make sure some of them aren't having troubles. Anyway, they went out this morning because we still have about six cows that haven't calved yet, and so far this season we've gotten fourteen babies and all of them fine---and that's when they found them."

"Found what?" Michael could barely contain himself, so frustrated was he at the length of time it was taking her to get her story out.

"It was just awful! There were three of the mama cows standing huddled together in the lower pasture, and at their feet were their three dead calves---all three had had their throats cut." And Stacy covered her eyes with her hands, "I can't think what kind of a person it would take to be so cruel. Those poor cows love their babies, and they don't harm anyone. Surely if someone hates us so much, surely they could find another way of getting at us--not hurting an innocent animal," and she looked at him in despair.

"I'd say someone knew just how much hurting your livestock would hurt you. I can't think of anything nastier someone could do to make you unhappy, short of physically harming you yourselves, and that takes a braver man than I think this is. It seems to me only a coward would go about killing a defenseless calf," and getting up he strode over to a window and looked out at the tree lined streets of the sleepy country town. "It looks like such a nice peaceful place, and so far it hasn't given me much trouble. Oh, I get an occasional drunk, a few speeding motorists, mostly out of towners, but this--this is bad, this takes a sick mind and I don't like it one bit!"

"I told Jo she should come and tell you when the barn burned, but she said no we could handle it." She sat a minute. "Oh Michael, you should have seen her face when she told me about those calves. I didn't know who to cry the hardest for, the cows, their poor dead babies, or Jo. It just about broke her heart."

Sheriff Ames, thinking about the tall, straight woman who had taken the time from her farm labors, for labor as hard as any man she did, to drive to church each Sunday morning and teach a bunch of young hooligans what was right and what was wrong, got madder and madder as he sat there. Damn it to hell he thought, I've been wanting to have a case to solve, but not one like this, not one at the expense of three sweet old ladies and an elderly negro couple who have never harmed any living soul. And what if I can't solve it--what if I can't find out whose doing this before even worse things happen, and feeling sick inside her turned to her.

"Now don't you worry Miss Stacy," he said and threw her another of his famous smiles. "You just get along home and tell Miss Jo that Michael is going to make up for all the times she had to send him out of Sunday School to stand in the hall. I'll put an end to whatever's going on out there." And by God I will, he thought as he escorted her to the door and out to her waiting car.

"I think Bertha must be blessed with a special gift from the gods. Even her jam cakes are light and everyone knows jam cakes are always heavy."

"I'll have to agree with you Troy, never have I eaten a better piece of cake," said Louise, practically smacking her lips over the last crumb.

"Just wait till you have some of her fried chicken with biscuits and cream gravy." cried Sam enthusiastically. "then you'll know why I'm so heavy."

"That's just your excuse. I'm not fat, but then I don't have four helpings at every meal," declared Jo.

"You stay so thin because you work far too hard and you have the rest of us to worry over," Sam looked affectionately at her sister, "and now all these extra problems—poor Jo."

"I guess the calves had to have been killed by someone," reasoned Troy, "I mean the cattle could keep breaking the fence down..."

"Six times," snorted Jo disgustedly.

"And the barn could have caught fire accidently," went on Troy ignoring her, "but the calves are something else. Jo, have any of you done anything to one of your neighbors that could anger them so they might want to strike back at you in this manner?"

"Of course not! We've never had a cross word with any of the neighbors."

"Well, what about the Turners—you and Daddy have always fought with them about that boundary land."

"Oh but my dear, all that is past now," declared Sam. "Don't you know that Stacy is engaged to marry Sidney? That's the younger Turner brother," she said, by way of explanation to Louise. "Why he's over here all the time, just like one of the family."

"But Sidney!" exclaimed Troy.

"Yes, and he's still as mealy mouthed and under his brother's thumb as he ever was, but evidently Jud has given his blessing to the both of them."

"Then there's something it it for Jud," remarked Troy grimly.

"How about the 450 acres?" spoke up Louise.

"I imagine that's got a lot to do with his decision, that, and his constant offers to take the place off our hands."

"But Stacy is so happy," beamed Sam, "Troy you must not fuss at her—Jo's done enough for all of us and I think it's wonderful they're going to be married. It sort of leaves us all with a little hope," she added wistfully.

"Sam you're a silly old romantic fool, but I guess we need to keep you in the family so we'll have someone around who can always look on the bright side of things," and Jo smiled indulgently at her. "Stacy and Bertha were in town about six months ago getting supplies, when Stacy literally ran Sidney down on the street. She said she couldn't see over the top of the box she was carrying, so she just plowed right into him and knocked him flat."

"Good for her!" cried Troy.

"Anyway, after she had helped him up and apologized, he ask her to have a cup of coffee with him at the drug store, and she said she felt so bad about what she'd done to him she couldn't refuse, and that's when the whole thing got started."

"After that," put in Sam, "he began to drive over for a visit about once a week, and then twice a week, and before long he asked her to marry him and she said yes."

"But I always remember him as being so wishy washy sort of." complained Troy.

"He still is," said Jo, "but you know Stacy, she's always had a thing for lame ducks. She realizes he's not much of a man, but she maintains we just don't understand him, and she feels if she can get him out from under the rule of his older brother she can put some starch into his spine and make a man out of him."

"Well," mused Troy, "she was always at her best when she was helping some injured animal or some wild thing from the woods that Amos would bring her, but to take on an insipid old man in his fifties might just prove to be her undoing."

"I tried to talk some sense into her," confided Jo, "but she just keeps telling me he needs her worse that we do, and she's determined to marry and take care of him."

"I'm sorry for her," sighed Troy, thinking of her husband and of the kind of love which had prompted their marriage, "and I'm afraid she's marrying him for all the wrong reasons."

Stacy will be all right," Sam predicted. "She's one of those people that need to be needed. That is the kind of love she wants, and let her alone you two—you'll see, Sidney and Stacy will get along just fine."

"If Jud drops dead," muttered Jo darkly.

"Is he really as overbearing as he once was?" asked Troy.

"Does a leopard change it's spots?" Jo rose. "It's getting time for me to help Amos out at the hog lot. Want to go and slop pigs Troy?" she asked, a wicked gleam in her eye.

"Forget it," screamed Troy, "you know I'm scared to death of those enormous beasts." She turned to Louise. "I fell down once in the hog lot when I was very young, and if Dad and Amos hadn't gotten to me in time I'm sure I would have been eaten alive." She shuddered, "Anyway, I've not been too fond of pigs since—even bacon turns me off when I stop to think of where it comes from."

Looking worried she turned to Jo, "Surely you and Amos aren't trying to keep this place going all by yourselves—neither one of you are spring chickens anymore."

"Thanks for the reminder," laughed Jo, "and yes, with the exception of a man that comes by three days a week, we run the place ourselves. Really, for all the good Randy Weaks does, you might just as well say we run the place ourselves."

A plate fell from Louise's hands, dropped to the floor and shattered into a thousand pieces as Ta Ta tucked his tail and scurried behind his mistress' chair.

"I'm so sorry," apologized Louise, "that dern dog jumped up on me and startled me so that I must have dropped the dish. I feel just terrible."

"Nonsense," Troy reassured her, "they're just old kitchen plates, but I can't imagine what possessed Ta--what a naughty dog!" and she looked under her chair and shook her finger at him.

Sam rose and headed for the kitchen, "I'll get a broom and have the pieces up in no time. Can I get you another plate and some more of that delicious cake?"

"No—no, I'm fine, I just feel bad about the dish."

"Forget it," said Troy, "it doesn't matter. Who is Randy Weaks?" she asked her sister.

"He's a man who came by a while ago asking if he could help us do some odd jobs about the place. He even offered to try and find the treasure saying we could split fifty—fifty if he did, so watch where you walk as he likes to dig holes but is pretty bad about filling them up again. Amos and I tolerate him because he can help lift heavy items that I can't, but three days a week is all I can stand having him around. I think after I pay him his week's wages he heads straight for that still, buys all the moonshine he can, and then stays drunk till that runs out and he shows up here again."

"How did he know about the treasure?" asked Troy.

"He told me he heard about it when he was a little boy. Evidently he came from a pretty large family and his dad had squatted on some land not too far from here at one time. His Paw, and I quote, had 'itchin feet,' so they'd move along after only three or four years. I don't remember any Weaks, but someone in town told me they did, and that if he was as shiftless as his paw, then he was good for absolutely nothing."

"Doesn't he have any family with him now?" inquired Louise.

"Not a soul that I know of," answered Sam returning with the broom and the dustpan, "maybe one of the reasons he drinks so much is because he's so lonely."

"More than likely he's so lonely cause he drinks so much!" said Jo with a snort. "Well, this isn't getting the chores done." And she turned to go out just as a car pulled into the front yard.

"I'll bet that's Stacy and Bertha," cried Troy rising and going to the window. "Oh, it is." And then she gave a horrified cry, "Oh dear God, Amos has let one of the sows get out of the lot and it's rushing straight for Bertha."

After depositing Stacy in the front seat of her car and waving she and Bertha on, Sheriff Ames returned to his office. Finishing up some paper work he had started prior to Stacy's visit, he typed out a preliminary report on this new and only case, and placed it in his desk drawer. He then rose, put on his hat, and for the first time in his short career, he rather sheepishly buckled on his gun and holster.

Well, he thought to himself as he passed a small mirror hanging on the wall, you look the part, Ames—now let's see if you can act it. Heaving a sigh, he squared his shoulders, swaggered out to the new patrol car, his secret pride and joy, and was soon seen speeding out of town and traveling not too very far behind Stacy and Bertha.

Matter of fact, he arrived just in time to see a curly, grey-haired lady come tearing down the front porch steps waving some kind of a spear with what looked like streamers floating from it, followed by some sort of tiny white animal that was obviously furious, and it looked as though they both were about to attack Bertha, who was screaming at the top of her lungs.

Slamming on his brakes, he threw open the door of his car, and raising his gun with both hands like they had taught him at the police academy, he shouted, "Halt in the name of the law!"

This announcement, coming on top of everything else so startled everyone, all, with the exception of Ta who now gave his attention to the Sheriff, shut up.

"Oh Lawd," cried Bertha, first to get her speech back, "Lawd Miss Troy don't hurt Sadie none, she's just like my own baby." And sure enough in all the melee one could see where the sow had retreated behind Bertha's bulk. "I always brings her a treat when I go to town and she been waiting for me all morning long." And she reached out and handed the pig a piece of candy.

"Shut up Ta!" snapped Troy, beginning to feel quite foolish. "I'm sorry Bertha, I thought the sow had gotten loose from the lot and was running out to attack you."

"Bless you Miss Troy, and you so afraid of pigs. I'm sorry I hollered at you." And Bertha at once engulfed Troy in an enormous embrace, almost suffocating her in the folds of her gargantuian breasts.

"What the hell is going on?" cried Michael, still pointing his gun at no one in particular, and as he watched the whole scene dissolved into hysteria. Jo sat down on the porch steps howling; Sam in the front door began gasping for breath, tears running down her cheeks; Stacy had her head down on the steering wheel, shoulders shaking; and from behind him a deep rumble could be heard from Amos who was bent over double and leaning on a shotgun for support. Facing him was another woman, a complete stranger, who looked about as baffled and bewildered as he.

"I think you can put your gun away Sheriff." said Troy, "I saw this sow out, thought it was after Bertha, and as a result I seemed to have made a complete fool of myself." And she headed for the house, head high and cheeks flaming. As much as Troy enjoyed a good joke, she never thought them very funny when they turned out to be at her expense.

"Oh Troy," stuttered Jo trying to get up from the steps, "don't be mad, we don't mean to laugh so—but if you could have seen yourself from the rear, that old umbrella waving, pieces of it falling off and that dog jumping." It was too much for her, and back onto the steps she fell holding her sides which were beginning to ache. "I'd forgotten what fun it was when you were around, never a dull moment." And off she went, hooting and howling again.

"Troy, bless you," cried Sam wiping away the tears that still streamed down her face, "none of us have enjoyed ourselves so much in years—you're just like a ray of sunshine." And she pulled her sister to her and kissed her.

Slightly mollified, Troy looked at everyone, and then seeing the dazed expression still on the faces of Louise and the Sheriff, her natural good humor restored itself and before she realized it, she was slapping her knee with the rest of them.

When at last sanity was restored, and exclamations made, everyone helped Bertha and Stacy unload their purchases and carry them into the house only to hear Bertha screaming in the kitchen.

"Good heavens, what now?" cried Troy.

"I think I can guess," said Stacy, viewing the remains of the cake and lemonade still left in the living room, "Don't draw your gun Michael!" and she suddenly went off into peals of laughter again.

"I think we both have a good case of egg on our face." smiled Michael looking all the while at Troy. "You and I are going to have to solve this mystery just to get our self respect back."

Troy thrilled at being spoken to and included in on such an exciting challenge was all set to open her mouth and agree, when Bertha appeared in the doorway, a thunder cloud hovering over her head, and a plate with one large wedge of jam cake sitting forlornly on it.

"Where is that Miss Sam?" she cried, tapping her foot impatiently.

"When you hollered I heard her head out the front door muttering something about feeding the pigs," said Stacy smiling.

"They done been fed!" snapped back Bertha.

"Not all of them," cried Michael, and deftly lifting the last piece of cake off the plate he sailed out the front door, mouth full and mumbling something about looking for clues.

"Wait for me!" cried Troy and after him she flew, the dog and Louise at her heels.

"Well, if that don't beat all." And Bertha, empty plate in hand, returned to her kitchen.

Stacy pays a visit to Sheriff Ames

By CHERIE BLANTON

This is the fourth installment of a novel, "Sticks and Stones May Break Your Bones," written by Cherie Blanton. The installments appear in the paper every Wednesday.

SUMMARY

Troy and Louise arrive at Rainbow's End where they are greeted by her sisters Jo and Sam and by the old caretaker Amos. Their homecoming is not as happy as it could have been, because the others have just discovered someone has killed some of their new calves.

At the same time Troy is learning of all this, her other sister Stacy, and Bertha, cook and wife of Amos, are on their way to town, where Stacy is preparing to go to the Sheriff and tell him of some of the strange events that are taking place at the old homestead.

Sheriff Ames, young and recently elected, is very upset at the thought that someone is harassing the harmless old ladies and the aged couple who live with them, by killing their livestock, setting fire to their tobacco barn and other such harassments. Remembering Miss Jo when she was his Sunday School teacher, he vows to accept the challenge of this, his first real case, and solve it.

Timid by Nature anyway, the thought of facing the Sheriff and relating the series of events which had led up to this meeting were almost more than she could bear, but Jo had insisted, and when Jo gave an order most people obeyed. Her hands fluttering over her hair to check that each strand was properly in place, and nervously wetting her lips, she heaved yet another great sigh along with a small prayer and stepped over the threshold of the building. Walking out of the bright sunlight and into the darker interior of the office caused her to stop a minute while her eyes adjusted themselves to the different light.

A chair scraped backwards, and Sheriff Ames, a tall, rugged looking young man came forward with his hand outstretched. "Why Miss Stacy, what on earth brings you into town on such a hot morning, not that I'm not pleased to see you." and he smiled that sweet smile which always made the ladies hearts flutter, and which had been such a vote getter for him when campaigning against Higgins for his office.

Stacy found herself thinking no wonder they made him Sheriff. He looks just like you would think an Angel of the Lord should, and then remembering some of the not so angelic stunts he had pulled when Jo taught him, she smiled also.

"Michael Ames, everytime I see you I think you've grown another inch." She arched her eyebrows and coyly continued, "My, how handsome you do look in that uniform. Poor Mr. Higgins, once you came on the scene with those big blue eyes he just never stood a chance now did he?"

"Handsome is as handsome does is what your sister used to tell me." He laughed aloud remembering, "I think Miss Jo thought I was pretty ugly most of the time.---But see here Miss Stacy, I know it wasn't for a look at me in my new uniform that you came today, now was it?"

"No Michael. There have been some strange things happening out at the farm and Jo thought perhaps we'd better come in and report them to you."

"What kind of things?" and taking her arm he guided her to a chair across the desk from him.

They sat for a moment in silence, only the whirring of the electric fan breaking the stillness, then Stacy cleared her throat and began to speak.

"I hardly know where to begin,---I guess at the beginning would be best wouldn't it?" She paused a moment, thought about what she had just said and smiled, "See, I'm sounding like a stupid idiot already."

"No you're not," he reassured her, "you just sound like someone who's very upset, and I think you're right--why not begin at the beginning."

"Well," she started, "about four months ago when Jo and Amos went out to the south pasture to check on the cattle one morning, they found a piece of the fence knocked down and most of the cattle strayed."

He smiled, "You know cattle, they're forever knocking down fences. What's that old saying, 'grass is always greener on the other side of the fence?"

"We thought that too." answered Stacy. "Amos came back to the house and got some tools to fix the fence with. Sam and I went back out with him to help Jo round up the cattle and put them back in while Amos repaired the damage that had been done; then we all went back to one of Bertha's good lunches and promptly dismissed the whole incident from our minds." She began to nervously twist a new looking ring she was wearing on her left hand, "You see Michael, the trouble is we've had to go out now at least once every two weeks to repair that fence. Last month we even moved the cattle to another pasture."

"And?" cried Michael now becoming more interested.

"The same thing. Poor Amos, I'm sure he repairs fences in his sleep at night." She frowned, "That's not all though. About two months ago,---wait, I know the exact date, because it was the day of the pig judging at the county seat and Bertha was planning on taking Sadie to show. She's so proud of that animal. The old sow that had her took a terrible dislike to the piglet and refused to feed her. Bertha wouldn't let Amos destroy her like he wanted to, instead she took her into their home and fed her day and night with a bottle, and now you should see her. It's so funny, Sadie thinks Bertha is her mama and follows her everywhere she can and Bertha is so enormous--well they really are sot of alike." She paused thinking of the strange sight the two of them made as they walked around the farm yard.

"What happened the day of the pig contest Miss Stacy?"

"Oh, see how I ramble? I do wish Jo had come and talked to you, she's really the one to tell you and she wouldn't have made such a dumb job of it."

"Nonsense," he consoled her, "You're doing just fine--now let's see, the day of the---"

"Yes, that night Bertha couldn't sleep well because she was so excited about Sadie being judged, so, at about three in the morning she got out of bed and went out to the hog lot to check on her pig. On the way there she looked across the fields and noticed the sky getting light. She said at first she didn't think anything of it, and then she suddenly realized three a.m. was too early in the morning for dawn to be breaking, so she ran back for Amos and hollered for us, and we got to the tobacco barn just as it was starting to catch fire good."

"I'm sorry for her," sighed Troy, thinking of her husband and of the kind of love which had prompted their marriage, "and I'm afraid she's marrying him for all the wrong reasons."

Stacy will be all right," Sam predicted. "She's one of those people that need to be needed. That is the kind of love she wants, and let her alone you two—you'll see, Sidney and Stacy will get along just fine."

"If Jud drops dead," muttered Jo darkly.

"Is he really as overbearing as he once was?" asked Troy.

"Does a leopard change it's spots?" Jo rose. "It's getting time for me to help Amos out at the hog lot. Want to go and slop pigs Troy?" she asked, a wicked gleam in her eye.

"Forget it," screamed Troy, "you know I'm scared to death of those enormous beasts." She turned to Louise. "I fell down once in the hog lot when I was very young, and if Dad and Amos hadn't gotten to me in time I'm sure I would have been eaten alive." She shuddered, "Anyway, I've not been too fond of pigs since—even bacon turns me off when I stop to think of where it comes from."

Looking worried she turned to Jo, "Surely you and Amos aren't trying to keep this place going all by yourselves—neither one of you are spring chickens anymore."

"Thanks for the reminder," laughed Jo, "and yes, with the exception of a man that comes by three days a week, we run the place ourselves. Really, for all the good Randy Weaks does, you might just as well say we run the place ourselves."

A plate fell from Louise's hands, dropped to the floor and shattered into a thousand pieces as Ta Ta tucked his tail and scurried behind his mistress' chair.

"I'm so sorry," apologized Louise, "that dern dog jumped up on me and startled me so that I must have dropped the dish. I feel just terrible."

"Nonsense," Troy reassured her, "they're just old kitchen plates, but I can't imagine what possessed Ta--what a naughty dog!" and she looked under her chair and shook her finger at him.

Sam rose and headed for the kitchen, "I'll get a broom and have the pieces up in no time. Can I get you another plate and some more of that delicious cake?"

"No—no, I'm fine, I just feel bad about the dish."

"Forget it," said Troy, "it doesn't matter. Who is Randy Weaks?" she asked her sister.

"He's a man who came by a while ago asking if he could help us do some odd jobs about the place. He even offered to try and find the treasure saying we could split fifty—fifty if he did, so watch where you walk as he likes to dig holes but is pretty bad about filling them up again. Amos and I tolerate him because he can help lift heavy items that I can't, but three days a week is all I can stand having him around. I think after I pay him his week's wages he heads straight for that still, buys all the moonshine he can, and then stays drunk till that runs out and he shows up here again."

"How did he know about the treasure?" asked Troy.

"He told me he heard about it when he was a little boy. Evidently he came from a pretty large family and his dad had squatted on some land not too far from here at one time. His Paw, and I quote, had 'itchin feet,' so they'd move along after only three or four years. I don't remember any Weaks, but someone in town told me they did, and that if he was as shiftless as his paw, then he was good for absolutely nothing."

"Doesn't he have any family with him now?" inquired Louise.

"Not a soul that I know of," answered Sam returning with the broom and the dustpan, "maybe one of the reasons he drinks so much is because he's so lonely."

"More than likely he's so lonely cause he drinks so much!" said Jo with a snort. "Well, this isn't getting the chores done." And she turned to go out just as a car pulled into the front yard.

"I'll bet that's Stacy and Bertha," cried Troy rising and going to the window. "Oh, it is." And then she gave a horrified cry, "Oh dear God, Amos has let one of the sows get out of the lot and it's rushing straight for Bertha."

After depositing Stacy in the front seat of her car and waving she and Bertha on, Sheriff Ames returned to his office. Finishing up some paper work he had started prior to Stacy's visit, he typed out a preliminary report on this new and only case, and placed it in his desk drawer. He then rose, put on his hat, and for the first time in his short career, he rather sheepishly buckled on his gun and holster.

Well, he thought to himself as he passed a small mirror hanging on the wall, you look the part, Ames—now let's see if you can act it. Heaving a sigh, he squared his shoulders, swaggered out to the new patrol car, his secret pride and joy, and was soon seen speeding out of town and traveling not too very far behind Stacy and Bertha.

Matter of fact, he arrived just in time to see a curly, grey-haired lady come tearing down the front porch steps waving some kind of a spear with what looked like streamers floating from it, followed by some sort of tiny white animal that was obviously furious, and it looked as though they both were about to attack Bertha, who was screaming at the top of her lungs.

Slamming on his brakes, he threw open the door of his car, and raising his gun with both hands like they had taught him at the police academy, he shouted, "Halt in the name of the law!"

This announcement, coming on top of everything else so startled everyone, all, with the exception of Ta who now gave his attention to the Sheriff, shut up.

"Oh Lawd," cried Bertha, first to get her speech back, "Lawd Miss Troy don't hurt Sadie none, she's just like my own baby." And sure enough in all the melee one could see where the sow had retreated behind Bertha's bulk. "I always brings her a treat when I go to town and she been waiting for me all morning long." And she reached out and handed the pig a piece of candy.

"Shut up Ta!" snapped Troy, beginning to feel quite foolish. "I'm sorry Bertha, I thought the sow had gotten loose from the lot and was running out to attack you."

"Bless you Miss Troy, and you so afraid of pigs. I'm sorry I hollered at you." And Bertha at once engulfed Troy in an enormous embrace, almost suffocating her in the folds of her gargantuian breasts.

"What the hell is going on?" cried Michael, still pointing his gun at no one in particular, and as he watched the whole scene dissolved into hysteria. Jo sat down on the porch steps howling; Sam in the front door began gasping for breath, tears running down her cheeks; Stacy had her head down on the steering wheel, shoulders shaking; and from behind him a deep rumble could be heard from Amos who was bent over double antl leaning on a shotgun for support. Facing him was another woman, a complete stranger, who looked about as baffled and bewildered as he.

"I think you can put your gun away Sheriff." said Troy, "I saw this sow out, thought it was after Bertha, and as a result I seemed to have made a complete fool of myself." And she headed for the house, head high and cheeks flaming. As much as Troy enjoyed a good joke, she never thought them very funny when they turned out to be at her expense.

"Oh Troy," stuttered Jo trying to get up from the steps, "don't be mad, we don't mean to laugh so—but if you could have seen yourself from the rear, that old umbrella waving, pieces of it falling off and that dog jumping." It was too much for her, and back onto the steps she fell holding her sides which were beginning to ache. "I'd forgotten what fun it was when you were around, never a dull moment." And off she went, hooting and howling again.

"Troy, bless you," cried Sam wiping away the tears that still streamed down her face, "none of us have enjoyed ourselves so much in years—you're just like a ray of sunshine." And she pulled her sister to her and kissed her.

Slightly mollified, Troy looked at everyone, and then seeing the dazed expression still on the faces of Louise and the Sheriff, her natural good humor restored itself and before she realized it, she was slapping her knee with the rest of them.

When at last sanity was restored, and exclamations made, everyone helped Bertha and Stacy unload their purchases and carry them into the house only to hear Bertha screaming in the kitchen.

"Good heavens, what now?" cried Troy.

"I think I can guess," said Stacy, viewing the remains of the cake and lemonade still left in the living room, "Don't draw your gun Michael!" and she suddenly went off into peals of laughter again.

"I think we both have a good case of egg on our face." smiled Michael looking all the while at Troy. "You and I are going to have to solve this mystery just to get our self respect back."

Troy thrilled at being spoken to and included in on such an exciting challenge was all set to open her mouth and agree, when Bertha appeared in the doorway, a thunder cloud hovering over her head, and a plate with one large wedge of jam cake sitting forlornly on it.

"Where is that Miss Sam?" she cried, tapping her foot impatiently.

"When you hollered I heard her head out the front door muttering something about feeding the pigs," said Stacy smiling.

"They done been fed!" snapped back Bertha.

"Not all of them," cried Michael, and deftly lifting the last piece of cake off the plate he sailed out the front door, mouth full and mumbling something about looking for clues.

"Wait for me!" cried Troy and after him she flew, the dog and Louise at her heels.

"Well, if that don't beat all." And Bertha, empty plate in hand, returned to her kitchen.

Mr. and Mrs. V.L. "Red" Kirby

Mr. and Mrs. V.L. "Red" Kirby will note their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday with an open house from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Community Room of Security Federal Savings and Loan Assn. of Sikeston.

The reception will be hosted by the couple's daughters, Sandra Brewer of El Dorado, Ill. and Sharon Stobaugh of Matthews.

Ann Landers

Families of 'foodaholics' live with locked cupboards

Dear Ann Landers: I have never seen this in your column. Yet I know many families have the problem.

Everyone sympathizes with an overweight person. They have TOPS, Weight Watchers, Overeaters Anonymous, etc. But what about the families of these gluttons? We must hide cookies, cakes, pies, ice cream and other goodies purchased or baked for guests.

We begin to make a dessert, feeling sure we have all the ingredients on hand. Then we discover the nuts are missing, or the chocolate, or the brown sugar. We plan a grocery list to fit our budgets. Guess who eats for two?

We are told "Fatty" hates himself, that we should be patient and keep mouths shut. The resentment grows.

Physicians don't want to be bothered. They know it's useless unless the patient wants to help himself. The whole family suffers, yet there is no place for the family to turn for counseling. Alcoholics have AA, smokers have clinics, fatties have their self-help groups, but the families of fatties have nowhere to turn. What do you suggest? -- Also Victims

Dear Also: A foodaholic is another version of an alcoholic. They must help themselves. Your only protection is the lock and a key.

Dear Ann Landers: Twice you have printed information in your column about Herpes Simplex II. I commend you for enlightening the public.

Now, how about a word in defense of women who suffer from Herpes Simplex I, which is not venereal? It, too, may break out in the genital area and is extremely painful. This may occur after a high fever, an upper respiratory infection, menstrual period, emotional upset, a reaction to certain foods, drugs, etc.

The discomfort of the ailment is bad enough without the stigma. It's very unfair to women sufferers who don't play around. Please, Ann Landers -- Equal Time

Dear E.T.: Be my guest. And now I'll say it AGAIN. Herpes Simplex I is NOT venereal and the same can be said of SOME cases of Herpes Simplex II. Thanks for giving me an opportunity to repeat the message.

Dear Ann Landers: I am engaged to a very beautiful, very fine and (I thought) very pure young woman. She comes from a religious, politically conservative family. We've been going together (exclusively) for four years. During all this time we have rarely gotten into heavy petting, much less slept together.

Last week my friends threw a rather far-out, raunchy bachelor party for me. There was too much drinking and of course the customary "stag" films.

I could be making a terrible mistake but I swear to God that my lovely, ladylike fiancee was the star performer in one of the films. I know she was a working girl before I met her and pulling down some pretty heavy bread.

My question is this: Should I confront her with my suspicions and risk losing her, or should I keep silent and tell myself I've got to be wrong? -- Going Nuts In Gainesville

Dear Going Nuts: Ask her -- flat out. If SHE says "No," apologize for your vote of no confidence and put the matter out of your head. If she says "yes," you've got a whole new set of problems to deal with, Brother. Good luck.

Don't get burned by a "line" that's too hot to handle. Play it cool with Ann Landers's guide to "Necking and Petting -- What Are the Limits?" Send your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120, enclosing 50 cents in coin an a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The wedding date of Ginger Desha Walls and Gary Steven McWaters was incorrectly reported to The Daily Standard. The couple will be married Aug. 14, not Aug. 20 as was reported in Monday's paper.

Woman teaches babies, handicapped to swim

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — You're in the kitchen and your infant child crawls unnoticed out the door and tumbles into the swimming pool. Instant tragedy, right?

Not necessarily, says Gay Lee, a sprightly 65-year-old woman who has spent much of her adult life teaching infants and handicapped children how to swim and survive in water.

She has done what many people have considered impossible — taught infants just out of the cradle how to swim, even how to jump off a diving board.

"I got the idea back in 1954 after reading a story in the paper about a grandmother who was babysitting two kids, both under 2, who wandered off and fell into a swimming pool and drowned," she said. "It shouldn't have happened."

She then launched her own survival program, determined to prevent similar tragedies, and began teaching infants to turn over on their backs and cry for help the moment they hit water.

"They don't like being on their backs anyway, so they cry," explains Mrs. Lee, a longtime swimming instructor from Milwaukie in the Portland suburbs.

Mrs. Lee, who didn't learn to swim until the age of 30, has received numerous local, state and regional awards for her accomplishments in working with the handicapped and initiating infant swimming survival techniques.

She has taught thousands of youngsters and adults how to swim. She has taken many children who could hardly walk — crippled, palsied, amputees — and turned them into good swimmers.

She has demonstrated her techniques across the country, even internationally. Film crews followed her through the Scandinavian countries on a demonstration tour, and several African newspapers covered her swimming lessons in the pool of the Nairobi Hilton.

But swimming lessons are over, at least temporarily, for Mrs. Lee, who is now fighting for her own survival against cancer. She suffered a back injury in a fall at home last February and was hospitalized.

An X-ray then revealed a malignant tumor of her spine. She's been hospitalized ever since.

She says she's not as concerned about dying as she is being away from the kids she taught.

"I just want to get out of here so I can get back to my swimming pool," she says. "We — my late husband and I — never had any children. I guess the good Lord didn't give me any so I could love many."

Democrats to retain majority of House seats

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Democrats seem assured of retaining heavy majorities in both houses of the Missouri Legislature as the Aug. 3 primary election approaches.

But Republicans hope to cut into the opposition's control to at least drop it below the two-thirds margin Democrats held in both the House and Senate for the past two years.

It was that party lock on the legislature coupled with a Republican in the governor's office that led to the first veto override in nearly 140 years last January. The Democrats currently hold a 114-49 majority in the House and a 23-11 majority in the Senate.

In the House, where all 163 seats will be filed at this fall's election, Republicans have already conceded 62 to the Democrats by not putting up candidates. Democrats, on the other hand, did not file candidates in only 18 House districts, those primarily in the GOP stronghold of southwest Missouri.

Only half of the 34 seats in the Senate will be decided in November so the Democrats will go into the election with a 13-4 majority of those seats not before voters. Republicans, then, did not put up candidates in six districts, insuring the Democrats 19 seats in the upper chamber before voters even go to the polls. Democrats, meanwhile, conceded only two Senate seats to the GOP by not filing candidates, both of those again in the Republican stronghold of the state.

Republican leaders believe, however, that while already awarding a significant number of legislative seats to the Democrats, their candidates in the other districts are strong enough to ensure a return of GOP control of some of the districts lost in the 1974 post-Watergate Democratic landslide.

The GOP lost 15 House and two Senate seats in the 1974 election, relinquishing gains the party had made in the 1972 GOP landslide under former president Richard Nixon. That 1972 election yielded the first state legislature since 1957-58 in which the Democrats did not control at least 100 House seats and two-thirds of the 34 Senate seats.

Local battles for paty nominations to the House and Senate have taken a back seat in primary election discussions as most of the attention is being focused on a heated race for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination and a proposed constitutional amendment to permit limited state aid to private schools.

Interest in legislative primary candidates has also suffered because of the few primary races for spots on the Nov. 2 general election ballot.

Absent any strong write-in campaigns, the winners of 41 House and three Senate seats are already known as those candidates face neither primary nor general election opposition.

Those completely uncontested seats will be returned to 28 Democratic and 13 Republican incumbents in the House and two Republican incumbents in the Senate. The third uncontested Senate seat goes to Democrat John Scott of St. Louis, currently a member of the House.

On the Republican side of the ballot, of the 101 House districts where candidates have filed only 23 pose primary contests, and in the Senate, where the GOP has candidates in 11 of the 17 districts, there are primary battles for only four nominations.

The Democrats, who have candidates for 145 House seats, have primary fights in 84 districts. Democratic battles for Senate nominations number nine out of the 15 districts where that party's members will be competing in November.

Thirty-two House members and eight senators are not seeking reelection and most of the primary battles involve competition in their districts to succeed them. The number of lawmakers retiring or seeking other offices insures one of the largest freshman classes in the legislature in years.

Cigarettes, fishing gear are stolen

EAST PRAIRIE — Several cartons of cigarettes and fishing equipment were stolen Monday night during a break-in at Haney's Store, located south of town on Highway 105, according to Deputy Sheriff Jack Ivie, who investigated the burglary.

Ivie said the lock had been pried off the front door.

The break-in was discovered about 6 a.m. Tuesday when the store was opened. Ivie said a complete list of stolen items would not be available until an inventory is taken.

Hearings are underway on funeral expense

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Hearings under way in Washington on proposed federal regulations for the funeral industry have focused new attention on a subject many people would rather forget: death.

Ignorance in this area is expensive, however. And more and more people are turning to memorial societies offering advance information and planning that can cut funeral costs by hundreds of dollars.

Memorial societies are nonprofit organizations seeking simplicity and economy in funerals. The groups arrange with local undertakers to provide simple funerals for members at specified costs. They also offer information on different types of services available and on alternatives to burial, including cremation and donation of the body to medical research.

"The whole emphasis is on pre-planning," said the Rev. Harry E. Smith, president of the Greater New Haven (Conn.) Memorial Society Inc.

The society's aim is to prevent a family having to make a decision while burdened with grief. "Often it (the funeral) becomes an expense that devastates the relatives for years," the Rev. Mr. Smith said.

The New Haven group is one of more than 100 organizations affiliated with the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies, Inc. The association has chapters in almost all the 50 states with an estimated membership of half a million people.

The National Funeral Directors Association, representing about 14,000 of the nation's 22,000 funeral directors, estimates that the average funeral in 1974, the latest year for which statistics are available, cost $1,207. That does not count expenses for the cemetery or crematorium, flowers or a grave marker. It said the average funeral director earned $18,700 in 1974.

Rebecca Cohen, executive secretary of the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies, said savings to members vary, but generally average about $500.

Alternatives to the traditional earth burial also can cut costs, Miss Cohen said. Bequeathing the body to science is the least expensive, but consumers should check with local medical authorities to determine needs. Cremation is another inexpensive option, Miss Cohen said, with charges generally ranging from $150 to $300.

The Federal Trade Commission accused the funeral industry last year of engaging in a series of deceptive practices and has proposed regulations to govern the business. The FTC started a three-week series of hearings on the proposed rules in Washington last week after similar sessions in New York, Chicago, Seattle, Los Angeles and Atlanta.

The proposals by the FTC staff would, among other things:

—Require funeral homes to provide consumers with more information about specific costs such as those for caskets and burial vaults.

—Ensure compliance with state laws prohibiting embalming without survivors' permission.

—Prohibit practices which tend to cut competition, such as restrictions on price advertising.

The address of the Continental Association of Funeral and Memorial Societies is Suite 1100, 1828 L St. Northwest, Washington, D.C., 20036. The National Funeral Directors Association is located at 135 W. Wells St., Milwaukee, Wis., 53203.

Armed forces

CAPE GIRARDEAU — John D. Heeb, 17, of Morley has enlisted in the United States Air Force, according to Staff Sgt. Jim Riggs, the local recruiter here.

Shortly after the enlistment ceremony, Airman Heeb flew to Lackland Air Force Base near San Antonio, Tex., for six weeks of basic training. The 1975 graduate of Scott County Central High School has accepted a job as an aircraft maintenance specialist.

After basic training, he will attend training in aircraft maintenance. He will learn to inspect, repair, maintain, service and modify aircraft and installed equipment; perform crew and flight chief and maintenance staff functions; and perform tow real operator functions.

Bank expansion expected in counties

By MICHAEL S. WEISBERG
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — As a result of the recently passed bill allowing banks in second and fourth class counties to expand their facilities, the state Division of Finance expects to receive many applications for such expansion in the coming weeks.

Irven L. Friedhoff, general counsel for the division, said, "We expect a good, strong response." His office has received seven applications to date, although the bill does not take effect until Aug. 13.

Provisions of House Bill 1198 permit a main banking office to establish and operate a separate facility in an incorporated or unincorporated town whose population does not exceed 1,550.

The new facility, which may not be located more than 15 miles from the main office, may also grant loans, making it, in effect, a full service bank.

Banks in third class counties basically remain unaffected by the new law because expansion was permitted prior to its passage. However, now they will be able to locate a facility up to 15 miles away, whereas before 10 miles was the maximum.

Supporters of this legislation said it would increase banking convenience in small rural towns previously unable to get a charter to incorporate its own bank.

Rep. Al Nilges, D-Bourbon, says now there will be more equitable banking throughout the state.

He said he introduced the bill because banks in the second class county he represents wanted to expand their facilities "to better serve the people."

One such bank is the First Missouri Bank of Franklin County. Its president, Tate Vossbrink, said he was very anxious to expand.

In fact, Vossbrink mailed his application to the Divsion of Finance last May, even though he knew that under the new law it could not be officially filed until Aug. 13.

Nilges said he thinks the new law "will even help the independent banks because now they too can make loans and expand without buying other smaller banks."

Traditionally, the independent bankers of the state were strongly opposed to bank expansion. The way they saw it was the larger banks would be allowed to build facilities anywhere within the county and gobble up the smaller banks. The result: the concentration of the state's resources in the hands of a few.

Despite their opposition, three of the seven applications in the Divsion of Finance office are from independent banks.

Under the bill, the approval of the commissioner of finance is needed before a bank can expand. But there are no statutory standards for approving or denying an application, Friedhoff said.

Judgment will be based on whether a bank can itself afford to expand; whether the bank's business will benefit from its growth; and whether the proposed site for the new facility actually is a "town."

Although basically optimistic about what the new law will mean for the out-state area, Friedhoff foresees one serious snag in the bill. The problem, he said, will emerge when two banks want to move into the same town.

The solution to the problem will lie in the hands of the commissioner, Friedhoff said. He will decide which bank can offer better services to the community and which bank can more easily afford the expansion.

MALDEN – Willis Conner, mayor of Dexter, has been elected president of the Bootheel Council on Criminal Justice for a 12-month period beginning Aug. 1.

Other new officers are: John H. Calvin of Sikeston Route Three, vice chairman, and R. J. Dirks of Malden, secretary-treasurer.

According to R. C. Henzi, executive director, the council will serve the area consisting of Scott, New Madrid, Mississippi, Stoddard, Dunklin and Pemiscot counties.

The council has the responsibility of recommending distribution of federal funds received in the law enforcement areas of police manpower, communications, police training, legal assistance, juvenile justice and courts. The council consists of five representatives from each of the above six counties.

Bank expansion expected in counties

By MICHAEL S. WEISBERG
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY — As a result of the recently passed bill allowing banks in second and fourth class counties to expand their facilities, the state Division of Finance expects to receive many applications for such expansion in the coming weeks.

Irven L. Friedhoff, general counsel for the division, said, "We expect a good, strong response." His office has received seven applications to date, although the bill does not take effect until Aug. 13.

Provisions of House Bill 1198 permit a main banking office to establish and operate a separate facility in an incorporated or unincorporated town whose population does not exceed 1,550.

The new facility, which may not be located more than 15 miles from the main office, may also grant loans, making it, in effect, a full service bank.

Tour Guide Puts Feeling Into Tours

CHICO, Calif. (AP) -- Maggie Gisslow, a tour guide at Bidwell Mansion, puts feeling into her tours.

She has to feel because she can't see.

Miss Gisslow, a recent psychology graduate from California State University, Chico, knows that the fireplace mantles in the old house are painted slate instead of marble, because real marble would feel colder.

And the mapmaking table in John Bidwell's study "feels neat," she says. Visitors on her tours never fail to reach over to compare feels.

Miss Gisslow said in a recent interview she started as a volunteer guide for 50 blind Sacramento school children. She then put out an information sheet in Braille, and was soon guiding sighted people on a volunteer basis.

Ranger Lee Shelton hired her.

Said Miss Gisslow: "I didn't want a stereotyped job like making brooms or putting labels on cans.

"I'm not handicapped. If you don't have the capacity to deal with people in a kind way, or if you can't treat others with respect, that's a handicap."

Bidwell, an early landowner and founder of Chico, was Prohibition Party candidate for U.S. President in 1892.

He was reportedly shown gold in a stream bed several years before the discovery which set off the 1849 Gold Rush, but put off exploitation because he thought lavish equipment would be needed.

Southwestern Bell request area rate increase hearings

JEFFERSON CITY -- Local hearings on a request by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. for a rate increase will be held by the Missouri Public Service Commission at seven locations, including two southeast Missouri sites , during August and September.

The hearings were set at outstate locations for the convenience of customers who wish to testify in regard to the company's request for an increase in gross annual revenues of $71.7 million.

The first southeast Missouri hearing will be held at 7 p.m. Aug. 9 in the Pemiscot County Court house , and is a recent addition to the hearing schedule which was set at the request of the city of Caruthersville.

An afternoon meeting beginning at 2 p.m. and an evening session starting at 7 p.m. Aug. 30 will be held in the meeting hall of the Arena Building in Arena Park at Cape Girardeau.

Additional hearings will be held in Springfield, Kansas City, Independence, Clayton and St. Louis during the two months.

The company, commission staff and other parties in the case are to present their evidence at a hearing beginning at 10 a.m. Sept. 20 in the commission hearing room on the 10 th floor of the Jefferson Building in Jefferson City and expected to continue through Oct. 8.

Persons who wish to testify in the case but do not want to intervene should contact Leland B. Curtis, commission counsel, or William M. Barvick, public counsel of the Department of Consumer Affairs, Regulation and Licensing.

The address and telephone number of the commission counsel is P.O. Box 360, Jefferson Building, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101 telephone number 751-2412. The address of the public counsel is 911A Leslie Blvd., Jefferson City, telephone 751-4857.

Southwestern Bell had been ordered by the commission to notify each of its customers of the requested increase in rates and the hearing dates. Estimated proposed increases would raise the bill of the average residential or business customer by about 15 per cent.

Also included in the rate proposal is a charge for directory assistance calls. T charge of 20 cents per call wou be applied if the customer ma more than three directory ca per month within his home ar code.

There would be no charge f directory assistance ca outside the customer's hon area code or for calls made handicapped customers or ca from coin phones, hospita hotels and motels.

The company also see permission to increase its stallation charges. If approv the charge for the typi residential installation would increased from $24 to $44 and t charge for the typical busin installation would be rais from $45 to $66.

All of the rates proposed the company have be suspended.

New Madrid to sponsor festival

NEW MADRID — An arts and crafts festival, open to all area residents and sponsored by the New Madrid Community Betterment Committee, is planned for Sept. 11 and 12 at the city park and pavilion. The festival hours will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sept. 11 and 1-5 p.m. Sept. 12.

Participants may sell or demonstrate their art or craft items or any type of hobby. A small entry fee will be charged to each booth, but there will be no commission obligation.

The festival is planned for fun and fellowship and to create community involvement.

Individuals or groups will be responsible for their own items and work, and will handle their own sales. Exhibitors must bring their own equipment and tables necessary to display their work, including folding chairs.

Anyone interested in participating in the festival is asked to write or call Mrs. Sarah Hunter, 195 St. Thomas, New Madrid, telephone number 748-2189, or Mrs. Frances Puckett, 840 Maple, New Madrid, telephone number 748-2169.

Southwestern Bell request area rate increase hearings

JEFFERSON CITY -- Local hearings on a request by Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. for a rate increase will be held by the Missouri Public Service Commission at seven locations, including two southeast Missouri sites , during August and September.

The hearings were set at outstate locations for the convenience of customers who wish to testify in regard to the company's request for an increase in gross annual revenues of $71.7 million.

The first southeast Missouri hearing will be held at 7 p.m. Aug. 9 in the Pemiscot County Court house , and is a recent addition to the hearing schedule which was set at the request of the city of Caruthersville.

An afternoon meeting beginning at 2 p.m. and an evening session starting at 7 p.m. Aug. 30 will be held in the meeting hall of the Arena Building in Arena Park at Cape Girardeau.

Additional hearings will be held in Springfield, Kansas City, Independence, Clayton and St. Louis during the two months.

The company, commission staff and other parties in the case are to present their evidence at a hearing beginning at 10 a.m. Sept. 20 in the commission hearing room on the 10 th floor of the Jefferson Building in Jefferson City and expected to continue through Oct. 8.

Persons who wish to testify in the case but do not want to intervene should contact Leland B. Curtis, commission counsel, or William M. Barvick, public counsel of the Department of Consumer Affairs, Regulation and Licensing.

The address and telephone number of the commission counsel is P.O. Box 360, Jefferson Building, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101 telephone number 751-2412. The address of the public counsel is 911A Leslie Blvd., Jefferson City, telephone 751-4857.

Southwestern Bell had been ordered by the commission to notify each of its customers of the requested increase in rates and the hearing dates. Estimated proposed increases would raise the bill of the average residential or business customer by about 15 per cent.

Also included in the rate proposal is a charge for directory assistance calls. T charge of 20 cents per call wou be applied if the customer ma more than three directory ca per month within his home ar code.

There would be no charge f directory assistance cal outside the customer's hon area code or for calls made l handicapped customers or cal from coin phones, hospita hotels and motels.

The company also see permission to increase its stallation charges. If approve the charge for the typic residential installation would increased from $24 to $44 and t charge for the typical busine installation would be rais from $45 to $66.

All of the rates proposed the company have be suspended.

Tour Guide Puts Feeling Into Tours

CHICO, Calif. (AP) -- Maggie Gisslow, a tour guide at Bidwell Mansion, puts feeling into her tours.

She has to feel because she can't see.

Miss Gisslow, a recent psychology graduate from California State University, Chico, knows that the fireplace mantles in the old house are painted slate instead of marble, because real marble would feel colder.

And the mapmaking table in John Bidwell's study "feels neat," she says. Visitors on her tours never fail to reach over to compare feels.

Miss Gisslow said in a recent interview she started as a volunteer guide for 50 blind Sacramento school children. She then put out an information sheet in Braille, and was soon guiding sighted people on a volunteer basis.

Ranger Lee Shelton hired her.

Said Miss Gisslow: "I didn't want a stereotyped job like making brooms or putting labels on cans.

"I'm not handicapped. If you don't have the capacity to deal with people in a kind way, or if you can't treat others with respect, that's a handicap."

He was reportedly shown gold in a stream bed several years before the discovery which set off the 1849 Gold Rush, but put off exploitation because he thought lavish equipment would be needed.

New Madrid to sponsor festival

NEW MADRID — An arts and crafts festival, open to all area residents and sponsored by the New Madrid Community Betterment Committee, is planned for Sept. 11 and 12 at the city park and pavilion. The festival hours will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sept. 11 and 1-5 p.m. Sept. 12.

Participants may sell or demonstrate their art or craft items or any type of hobby. A small entry fee will be charged to each booth, but there will be no commission obligation.

The festival is planned for fun and fellowship and to create community involvement.

Individuals or groups will be responsible for their own items and work, and will handle their own sales. Exhibitors must bring their own equipment and tables necessary to display their work, including folding chairs.

Anyone interested in participating in the festival is asked to write or call Mrs. Sarah Hunter, 195 St. Thomas, New Madrid, telephone number 748-2189, or Mrs. Frances Puckett, 840 Maple, New Madrid, telephone number 748-2169.

What's the law?

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Norton was so avid a football fan that he even knew the nationality of each player on the All-American Team. And, over a period of 21 yeas, he only missed one home game of his local team.

What he would have preferred to have missed, however, was the coach of the local team -- particulary when the team blew its annual game with its traditional rival in the same manner as it had done the year before.

Blaming the loss on the coach's repeated stupidity, Norton confronted the coach after the game with a sneer and a clenched fist. Instead of laying one on the coach, however, he flattened the coach's assistant when the latter stepped gallantly between the two men.

Sued by the assistant coach for his injuries, Norton shook his head in dismay.

"I really can't be held responsible for what happened," he insisted plaintively in court. "I remembered the coach's blunder from the year before and just got uncontrollably angry. Like any other red-blooded American football fan, I just lost my head."

"What happened the year before," responded the assistant coach, "has nothing to do with this case. I got slugged this year and not last year."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you consider Norton's passion for football in deciding the case?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that, while he realized that the emotions of an avid football fan are often volatile and are on occasion more serious than a layman might imagine, the passage of time from one football season to another affords sufficient time for passions to cool. For that reason, concluded the judge, Norton's anger, which allegedly had been carried over from the year before, could not be considered.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband is 45 years old, 6 foot 3 and weights 190 pounds. He runs about eight miles a week in four periods, swims a mile three times a week, plays tennis at least once a week, often two or three hours on Saturday and Sunday in summer.

I am very conscious of nutrition and he has a good diet. Even so, for a number of years he has been taking vitamin supplements, including extra vitamin C (500 milligrams per day) which I don't feel necessary in view of his balanced diet.

Recently he had a company physical and has received $35 worth of pills with no explanation except to take daily. He gets Cyclospasmol for his Raynaud's disease which I assume he will take only in coldest weather. The disease does not really bother him except that his fingers turn white when it is cold. He is to take Sterazolidin for his occasional complaints of tennis elbow, which has never been severe enough to prevent him from accepting any invitation to play. He also gets Colbenemid because on three separate occasions during a three week period his uric acid count has been high. He had been complaining about a sore second toe during the jogging and tennis.

The doctor who prescribed all these pills is a board certified internist and undoubtedly capable. But I feel that he may be catering to mild hypochondria and I am somewhat concerned about the interaction of all these pills, since at the moment my husband is taking all three in addition to his vitamins. Have you any comment?

DEAR READER — Yes, I have a comment. I appreciate your concern but it is misplaced. It is easy for you to say your husband's white fingers in cold weather don't bother him but he may be a better judge of how his fingers feel. It so happens that Cyclospasmol is not effective if used sporadically as you suggest only in coldest weather.

Anyone, particularly a man, since men are more susceptible to its complications, with abnormally high uric acid levels should be taking medicine to control it. This goes double if the man has symptoms. Untreated high uric acid levels often lead to gradual changes that could be prevented by the good treatment your husband is receiving.

Your husband would not be the first person with some elbow problems who persists in playing tennis and that is no argument against him having medicines for it.

You needn't worry about the interaction of the various medicines and vitamins that your husband is taking. You are probably right that he doesn't need the extra vitamin C but in that amount it is not likely to hurt him either. I would be more concerned about the eggs you feed him regularly that you mentioned in the rest of your letter describing your healthy diet for him.

It sounds to me as if your husband is fortunate to have a good doctor who is doing his best to not only help your husband with his present problems but help keep him in good health for the future. You should be pleased, not concerned.

Making common convention cause

By Ray Cromley

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — National political conventions are giant trade fairs.

John Gardner was at the recent Democratic national meeting from Common Cause. Not to boost Jimmy Carter — Gardner is a Republican. But, with a bevy of assistants numbering between 15 and 25, he was there to buttonhole the estimated 400 to 500 Common Cause members at the Convention from all over the nation, whip them into a concerted 50-state campaign to get through two measures Gardner is pushing now — bills that would require detailed reports by lobbying organizations and thorough financial disclosures by congressmen.

The Gardner campaign was as organized as Carter's. Each Common Cause member was to make it personally clear to his congressman that he was expected to work to get these bills out of committee unscathed and vote for them on the floor. Each senator was to be pressured on the financial disclosure bill, the lobbying measure having passed that chamber.

Congressmen up for election were to be told that if they did not cooperate, their lack of effort, or their negative vote would be used against them publicly in the campaigns this fall.

Gardner and his group have a powerful lever in that several hundred of the delegates and alternates, many politically prominent at home, and numbers of the candidates and their wives, are Common Cause members, including Mrs. Jimmy Carter and her husband.

Whether or not the Gardner-Common Cause effort will succeed is another matter. Members of Congress have been notoriously coy about revealing their financial holdings, their business connections, their stock and commodity trading, their legal clients and incomes in detail — and it is likely in the minds of most observers I've talked to that the financial disclosure bills will remain stalled in committee or emasculated before they reach the House and Senate floors.

The same fate may be in store for the publicity-for-lobbyists bill in the House, though there's a little more hope here in that the measure did get through the Senate.

But Common Cause was not the only group offering wares at the convention. Also pressing their special interests were the Labor Coalition, National Amnesty Council, Black Leaders Democratic Caucus, Italian American Committee, Right to Life, Gay Rights Caucus, New Democratic Coalition, National Organization for Women, Americans for Democratic Action, the Ralph Nader organizations, National Abortion Rights Action League, Energy Action Caucus, United Farm Workers, Machinists, American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes, Longshoremen, Electrical Workers, National Education Association and the Friends of Animals, Inc. (advocating a boycott of tuna).

A hookers group was on the fringe.

Though the Democratic presidential nomination had been sewn up well before the convention, a bevy of men and women were there establishing a base for future years.

Jerry Brown of California was campaigning for Brown, building contacts and setting alliances virtually until the last delegates headed for home — more than a day after Carter had received the formal votes, the nomination and the Brown oath of allegiance.

Mo Udall's withdrawal, his releasing of delegates pledged to him and his personal pledge to become a Carter worker were as much a plea for Udall votes at the convention as a concession of defeat.

But Brown and Udall were not alone. The lobbies of the convention hotels were filled with candidates for almost every conceivable office, future candidates and those desiring to move up in the party structure, each seeking to make his name known to those in power and to others who might be useful in the future.

In short, it was a typical convention.

Flying days turn into new series

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Quite a few years fled the lined, leathery face of Gregory "Pappy" Boyington when he saw the old Corsair fighter at the airport. He got the Medal of Honor flying a plane like it two wars ago.

No matter that the retired colonel, who shot down six Japanese planes during his Flying Tiger days in China and Burma and another 22 in the South Pacific as a Marine, had spotted a minor flaw.

"Never had those on my plane for obvious reasons," he grinned, noting the six small Japanese flags painted near the cockpit. Each meant an aerial victory. "They'd single you out in a fight."

The Corsair, owned by a Beverly Hills man, had the markings of Marine squadron VFM-312. Pappy's squadron, its pilots all picked by him, was VMF-214, famed in and outside Marine aviation as the "Black Sheep" gang.

Fortunately, the ship he saw isn't being used in the new NBC series, "Baa Baa Black Sheep," based on his best-selling 1958 book about his own life and the men he flew with in World War II.

Boyington, 63, a native of Idaho, now lives in Fresno, Calif., with his wife, Jo, who is technical advisor on the show.

A friendly, gravel-voiced guy who belies his tough, don't-give-a-hoot wartime reputation, he said his book almost became a movie shortly after 1958, when Columbia Pictures bought the movie rights under a two-year option.

"But the script was horrible," he shuddered, "I just kept quiet until the two years were up. And they never made the film."

In 1974, he said, a TV producer convinced him the book could be made into a realistic series emphasizing the wild, often black humor that kept his fliers — and others in actual combat — from going nuts.

"So I said, 'Hell, I'm a gambler. Okay — if it's done the way we're talking here," Pappy recalled. "And what I meant by that was an honest-to-God, true-life sense of humor, a real, rough kind....

"Because, fact is, some of your most priceless humor stories throughout history do come from the stark reality and tragedy of human life."

About his legendary Black Sheep: Boyington called them his kind of Marines. Sure, they raised cain, but they were deadly come time for business.

"Most of 'em were quite young, adventurous types," he said. "They didn't mind risking their necks. They were full of adrenalin and they'd occasionally — or more than occasionally — get full of booze.

"But when they went in, they were strictly pilots and athletes."

He led them until Jan. 3, 1944, when he was shot down near Japanese-held Rabaul. He spent the rest of the war in Japanese prison camps. He came home a hero and, with several other Marines and Navy men, was awarded the Medal of Honor by President Truman.

He was asked if he'd seen major flaws in the TV version of his Black Sheep days. He said no, calling the acting excellent and the show reasonably accurate, even with some "artistic liberties" — like putting nurses on a forward base with the fliers for romantic subplots.

"If that'd actually happened, maybe we could have promoted the war another five years," Pappy drawled. Then he grinned until the crow's feet around his pilot's eyes went clear back to his ears.

What's the law?

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Norton was so avid a football fan that he even knew the nationality of each player on the All-American Team. And, over a period of 21 yeas, he only missed one home game of his local team.

What he would have preferred to have missed, however, was the coach of the local team -- particulary when the team blew its annual game with its traditional rival in the same manner as it had done the year before.

Blaming the loss on the coach's repeated stupidity, Norton confronted the coach after the game with a sneer and a clenched fist. Instead of laying one on the coach, however, he flattened the coach's assistant when the latter stepped gallantly between the two men.

Sued by the assistant coach for his injuries, Norton shook his head in dismay.

"I really can't be held responsible for what happened," he insisted plaintively in court. "I remembered the coach's blunder from the year before and just got uncontrollably angry. Like any other red-blooded American football fan, I just lost my head."

"What happened the year before," responded the assistant coach, "has nothing to do with this case. I got slugged this year and not last year."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you consider Norton's passion for football in deciding the case?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that, while he realized that the emotions of an avid football fan are often volatile and are on occasion more serious than a layman might imagine, the passage of time from one football season to another affords sufficient time for passions to cool. For that reason, concluded the judge, Norton's anger, which allegedly had been carried over from the year before, could not be considered.

Dr. Lamb

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband is 45 years old, 6 foot 3 and weights 190 pounds. He runs about eight miles a week in four periods, swims a mile three times a week, plays tennis at least once a week, often two or three hours on Saturday and Sunday in summer.

I am very conscious of nutrition and he has a good diet. Even so, for a number of years he has been taking vitamin supplements, including extra vitamin C (500 milligrams per day) which I don't feel necessary in view of his balanced diet.

Recently he had a company physical and has received $35 worth of pills with no explanation except to take daily. He gets Cyclospasmol for his Raynaud's disease which I assume he will take only in coldest weather. The disease does not really bother him except that his fingers turn white when it is cold. He is to take Sterazolidin for his occasional complaints of tennis elbow, which has never been severe enough to prevent him from accepting any invitation to play. He also gets Colbenemid because on three separate occasions during a three week period his uric acid count has been high. He had been complaining about a sore second toe during the jogging and tennis.

The doctor who prescribed all these pills is a board certified internist and undoubtedly capable. But I feel that he may be catering to mild hypochondria and I am somewhat concerned about the interaction of all these pills, since at the moment my husband is taking all three in addition to his vitamins. Have you any comment?

DEAR READER — Yes, I have a comment. I appreciate your concern but it is misplaced. It is easy for you to say your husband's white fingers in cold weather don't bother him but he may be a better judge of how his fingers feel. It so happens that Cyclospasmol is not effective if used sporadically as you suggest only in coldest weather.

Anyone, particularly a man, since men are more susceptible to its complications, with abnormally high uric acid levels should be taking medicine to control it. This goes double if the man has symptoms. Untreated high uric acid levels often lead to gradual changes that could be prevented by the good treatment your husband is receiving.

Your husband would not be the first person with some elbow problems who persists in playing tennis and that is no argument against him having medicines for it.

You needn't worry about the interaction of the various medicines and vitamins that your husband is taking. You are probably right that he doesn't need the extra vitamin C but in that amount it is not likely to hurt him either. I would be more concerned about the eggs you feed him regularly that you mentioned in the rest of your letter describing your healthy diet for him.

It sounds to me as if your husband is fortunate to have a good doctor who is doing his best to not only help your husband with his present problems but help keep him in good health for the future. You should be pleased, not concerned.

New gas increase faces immediate challenge from consumer advocates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Power Commission's new $1.5-billion increase in the nation's gas bill faces immediate challenge from consumer advocates, who call it too high and too hasty.

Energy Action, a consumer organization, planned to ask the commission and the U.S. Court of Appeals not only for reconsideration of the rate hike, but also to stop it from taking effect in the meantime.

The FPC announced on Tuesday it was increasing the nationwide ceiling prices for natural gas in sales by producers to interstate pipelines. The impact of the rate hike on natural gas consumers was expected to vary according to weather, distance from gas-producing areas and other factors. However, the average annual residential gas bill would go up 6 per cent or $15.60, according to some estimates.

Following the FPC decision, Energy Action said it plans to appeal and said other consumer groups and some state regulators may join it.

Already in their favor is the dissenting opinion of FPC commissioner Don S. Smith who said the new ceiling price schedule is too high and is not justified by the cost of producing gas.

Tom Girard, a spokesman for Energy Action, said his group also objected to the FCC procedure in reaching the decision and to the absence of any requirement that gas producers reinvest the proceeds of the higher rates to search for new gas supplies. The need for more incentives to develop new gas resources is one of the main justifications for the increase.

The FPC action was praised by the American Gas Association, a trade organization of gas pipeline companies, which said "the new higher prices will help some and, we hope, substantially."

But the AGA said it is still necessary to remove federal regulation entirely from interstate natural gas sales.

The FPC does not regulate gas prices at the consumer level, in general, but regulates the prices paid by interstate pipelines to the gas producers for gas to be sold outside the state of origin.

Gas sold inside the state where it is produced, "intrastate gas," is not subject to FPC regulation.

While the FPC has maintained a ceiling price of 52 cents per thousand cubic feet on gas brought into the interstate market since Jan. 1, 1973, unregulated gas sold on the intrastate market recently has commanded an average of $1.55 per thousand cubic feet.

One effect of this price difference has been to encourage intrastate gas sales, which might deprive interstate pipelines, distant states and their gas consumers of needed supplies.

To make interstate pipelines more competitive for available gas supplies, the FPC authorized a new national ceiling price of $1.42 per thousand cubic feet in Tuesday's decision, with additional increases of one cent every three months.

This maximum applies to the newest gas supplies, brought into the market after Dec. 31, 1974. Gas supplies dating to 1973 and 1974 were assigned a new price ceiling of $1.01 per thousand cubic feet.

Openings remain for high school debaters

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Openings remain for both high school students and their coaches in a debate workshop scheduled in early August at Southeast Missouri State Univeristy, but interested parties had better hurry. Friday is the application deadline, according to Dr. Thomas Harte, the workshop director.

The workshop will run Aug. 8-13 for the high school students and Aug. 11-13 for the teachers, who may earn one hour of graduate credit by their participation.

Purposes of the workshop, according to Harte, are to give the students a head start on the 1976-77 high school debate topic, to introduce beginning debaters to techniques of interscholastic competition, and to enable experienced debaters to polish their skills.

Sessions also will be offered for both veterans and inexperienced debate coaches or teachers. They will gain firsthand experience in coaching and director students and in managing debate tournaments.

The high schoolers, meanwhile, will live in air- conditioned university housing for the week, studying and socializing together. they will use university research facilities, participate in discussions and work with instructor individually.

Concluding the workshop will be an actual debate tournament.

Grain sorghum insect meeting set for Thursday

BLOOMFIELD — Two grain sorghum insect meetings will be held Thursday for the benefit of Stoddard County farmers, according to Tom Brown, area agronomy specialist at the County University of Missouri Extension Center.

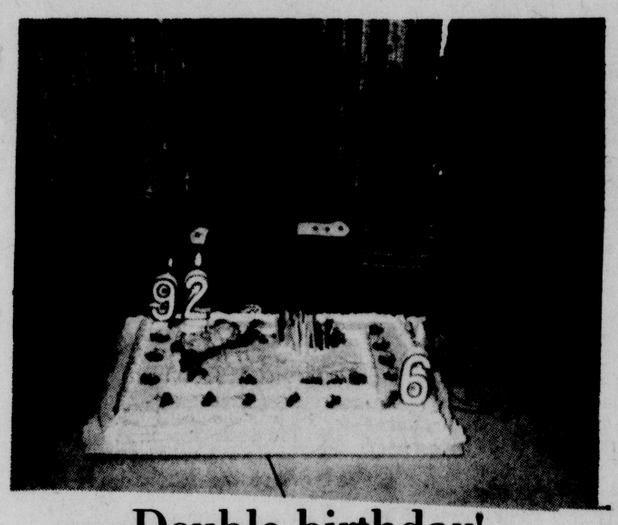
How to find and identify sorghum midge, how to determine when a field will be sprayed and recommended control measures will be demonstrated and discussed. Other insects that can be expected to damage grain sorghum between now and harvest time will also be discussed.

Edward Kowalski, new area entomology specialist from the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville, will be present to assist with the meetings.

A morning meeting will begin at East City Park in Dexter at 9:30 a.m. After a brief speaking session at the park, the group will go to a nearby field to check for midge.

An afternoon meeting will be held at 1:30 p.m. in a grain sorghum field on the Anson Knoderer farm, located on Route O approximately one mile west of Painton.

All grain sorghum producers and other interested persons may attend.



Double birthday!

Mildred Trousdale, left, of Phoenix, Ariz., formerly of Sikeston, and her great- grandson, Bryant Douglas Parks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Parks of Cape Girardeau, were honored Sunday at a double birthday party in the home of Eugene Ozment, 203 Matthews Lane. Mrs. Trousdale, 92, who is in the Sikeston area visiting relatives, was a long-time resident of Kathleen Avenue. Other relatives present at the party were Genevieve, Donal Ross, Eugene, Mary Lou, Cheryl and Donald Eugene Ozment.

Celebrates 11th birthday

Among the 20 guests at the party was the honoree's grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Smith of East Prairie. She is also the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Cantrell of Sikeston.

New gas increase faces immediate challenge from consumer advocates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Power Commission's new $1.5-billion increase in the nation's gas bill faces immediate challenge from consumer advocates, who call it too high and too hasty.

Energy Action, a consumer organization, planned to ask the commission and the U.S. Court of Appeals not only for reconsideration of the rate hike, but also to stop it from taking effect in the meantime.

The FPC announced on Tuesday it was increasing the nationwide ceiling prices for natural gas in sales by producers to interstate pipelines. The impact of the rate hike on natural gas consumers was expected to vary according to weather, distance from gas-producing areas and other factors. However, the average annual residential gas bill would go up 6 per cent or $15.60, according to some estimates.

Following the FPC decision, Energy Action said it plans to appeal and said other consumer groups and some state regulators may join it.

Already in their favor is the dissenting opinion of FPC commissioner Don S. Smith who said the new ceiling price schedule is too high and is not justified by the cost of producing gas.

Tom Girard, a spokesman for Energy Action, said his group also objected to the FCC procedure in reaching the decision and to the absence of any requirement that gas producers reinvest the proceeds of the higher rates to search for new gas supplies. The need for more incentives to develop new gas resources is one of the main justifications for the increase.

The FPC action was praised by the American Gas Association, a trade organization of gas pipeline companies, which said "the new higher prices will help some and, we hope, substantially."

But the AGA said it is still necessary to remove federal regulation entirely from interstate natural gas sales.

The FPC does not regulate gas prices at the consumer level, in general, but regulates the prices paid by interstate pipelines to the gas producers for gas to be sold outside the state of origin.

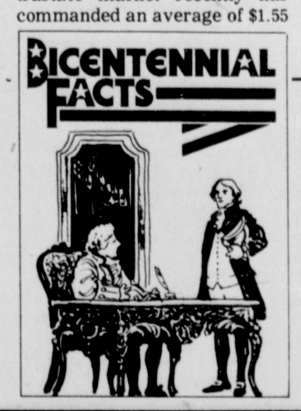
Gas sold inside the state where it is produced, "intrastate gas," is not subject to FPC regulation.

While the FPC has maintained a ceiling price of 52 cents per thousand cubic feet on gas brought into the interstate market since Jan. 1, 1973, unregulated gas sold on the intrastate market recently has commanded an average of $1.55 per thousand cubic feet.

One effect of this price difference has been to encourage intrastate gas sales, which might deprive interstate pipelines, distant states and their gas consumers of needed supplies.

To make interstate pipelines more competitive for available gas supplies, the FPC authorized a new national ceiling price of $1.42 per thousand cubic feet in Tuesday's decision, with additional increases of one cent every three months.

This maximum applies to the newest gas supplies, brought into the market after Dec. 31, 1974. Gas supplies dating to 1973 and 1974 were assigned a new price ceiling of $1.01 per thousand cubic feet.



In anticipation of foreign contacts and alliances the Continental Congress, on Nov. 29, 1775, appointed a five-man, Committee of Secret Correspondence (which was to become the State Department), to investigate the possibility of obtaining foreign aid. The Committee decided on Mar. 3, 1776, to send an agent to France in the guise of a merchant and investigate the possibilities of French aid and political support.

Deaths

Sudie Quertermous

BENTON — Sudie Quertermous, 87, of Route One died at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Chaffee General Hospital.

She was born Oct. 25, 1888 to the late Henry and Helen Martin Wheeler in Crittenden County, Ky.

Surviving are: her widower, Charlie Quertermous; two sons, Howard Quertermous of Pontiac, Mich., and Harold Quertermous of Six Lakes, Mich.; and 17 grandchildren, 26 great-grandchildren and two great-great- grandchildren.

Friends may call after 2 p.m. today at Nunnelee Funeral Chapel in Sikeston, where services are scheduled at 1:30 p.m. Thursday. The Rev. Raymond Hannah of Fredericktown will officiate.

Burial will follow in Unity Cemetery near Benton.

J. M. Mitchell

PORTAGEVILLE — Masonic rites and graveside services for John Mayes Mitchell, 59, an accountant who died Sunday, were conducted at 10 a.m. today in the Portageville Cemetery. The Rev. David Richardson, pastor of the United Methodist Church, officiated, and DeLisle Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

Born June 4, 1917 in Portageville, he was a son of the late Oscar and Mayme Mayes Mitchell.

Mitchell initiated the annual Christmas party forFarmington State Hospital patients in 1960 and had remained active in raising funds and coordinating the event.

In 1973, he was paid tribute and received a citation from the Knights of Columbus Council in Portageville for his dedication and personal concern for others by making the Christmas party possible.

A memorial fund to continue the Farmington Christmas party has been established at Farmers Bank in Portageville.

He is survived by one brother, Ely Mitchell of Cape Girardeau, and an aunt, two uncles, two nephews and two nieces.

Virgil Decker

Virgil Decker, 73, 138 N. Handy St., died unexpectedly Monday at his home and the body was found Tuesday by a relative. Coroner Gene Nunnelee confirmed that the death was of natural causes.

He was born Jan. 31, 1903 in Lilbourn.

On Sept. 6, 1941, he married Hazel Reno, who preceded him in death in 1967.

He was a retired employe of Welsh Baby Carriage Co. in St. Louis.

Friends may call after 5 p.m. today at O'Guinn Funeral Home, where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Burial will follow in Forest Hills Memorial Gardens near Morley.

In further discussion Manning said that a semi-annual financial report would be presented to the board at the next meeting, Aug. 31, and then he presented a semi-annual report on services conducted by the department, which the board accepted.

Manning told board members he had notified Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau that the department would no longer be able to take part in the university's student nursing program, due to an increased workload and lack of personnel.

He said a secretary is needed at the Sikeston office, since telephone traffic has been consuming a lot of the nurse's time, which could be better spent handling patients.

He said the Home Health Agency, which is located in the same building as the health department in Sikeston, has been successful in obtaining a secretary by providing on-the-job-training under the WIN (Work Incentive) Program, which is federally and state funded and operated by the Department of Labor and the Division of Family Services.

The board agreed with Manning on the student nursing program and also approved the placement of a secretary under the WIN program.

Plane carrying 70 passengers, crew crashes

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A plane of the Czechoslovak CSA airline carrying 70 passengers and a crew of six crashed on a domestic flight from Prague to Bratislava today, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK said today.

Unconfirmed reports said the plane, probably a Soviet-built Ilyushin-18 with an experienced pilot at the controls, nose-dived near a lake of the Zlate Pisky (Golden Sands) recreational area.

CTK did not mention survivors, and it was feared there would be few if any.

The news agency in its domestic service said it received the crash report from the Communist party Central Committee.

Observers said the Central Committee's concern with the crash indicated a major death toll or that a top party official may have been aboard.

CTK said only that rescue operations were being carried out and an investigation was begun.

C'ville men are indicted

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal appeals court has reinstated indictments against two Caruthersville men accused of firearms violations.

The 8th U.S. Court of Appeals ruled in a split decision Tuesday that the indictments should be reinstated in spite of an 11-month delay between completion of a federal investigation and the indictments.

The delay, the court ruled, did not prejudice the cases of Noel Quinn and Lee Wilson.

Quinn was charged with 10 counts of violating firearms laws and Wilson with one count of dealing in firearms without a license.

A U.S. District judge had earlier dismissed the indictments because of the delay.

The indictments were for alleged violations that were committed in 1974.

Record number of voters to go to polls

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A record 1.25 million voters will go to the polls Tuesday in the state's primary election, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick predicted today.

The predicted voter turnout, 52 per cent of those who have registered, would break the record of 1.03 million set in the 1936 primary and marks only the third time in state history when more than a million persons went to the polls.

The state's chief election official said the heated Democratic primary for the U. S. Senate nomination and controversy over a proposed constitutional amendment to permit limited state aid to private schools was responsible for the optimistic voter forecast.

He also noted that in the final three months of voter registration this year, more persons registered than during the first 16 months.

This is a healthy sign for participatory democracy," Kirkpatrick said. "We intend to continue urging the highest possible level of citizen involvement."

The projected 1.25 million voter turnout, however, represents only 37 per cent of the state's voting age population, Kirkpatrick said, although that percentage is higher than the participation in the 1972 primary.

While acknowledging his forecast is optimistic, Kirkpatrick pointed out that his forecast of voter turnout in 1974 was only 17,000 off and in 1972 only 4,300 off.

Gets new swimming pool

The Sikeston Regional Center for Developmentally Disabled, No. 1 Plaza Drive, is getting a new swimming pool to serve Sikeston area retarded and handicapped citizens. Organizations instrumental in providing funds for the swimming pool project are the Sikeston area CB Club, Keystone Class of First Christian Church and the Sikeston Jaycees. The CB Club donated $9,000, the Keystone Class $500, and the Jaycees $400. Pictured at the construction site, from left, are Nancy Lawrence, secretary- treasurer; Dr. B. G. Schoch, board of directors; David Ragan, director of the regional center; Bill Partin, board of directors; Bill Leonard, president of CB Club; Sandra Gish, board of directors; Mildred Marks, treasurer of the Association of Retarded Citizens. All are members of the CB club except Ragan and Mrs. Marks. The pool will be 20 feet wide and 40 feet long. Minimum depth will be three feet and the maximum depth will be five feet. The wading pool will be eight feet in diameter and 12 inches deep. The project contract was awarded to Alan Craig Swimming Pools.

I would expect, unless there is some miracle, that next year we would be faced with increasing property taxes to support a specific level of services. That prediction could be effected by the rate of inflation and other things.

The council will be faced with a similar question next year in terms of "do we need to raise taxes to support what we have or do we need to cut back."

Q. What kind of cutbacks could we see next year?

A. Right now, I think it is too early to tell in terms of specific reductions because there are so many things that cannot be determined right now. The biggest single cost to the city and to most businesses is salaries. What inflation does this year, will determine largely the increase in next year's budget.

Q. Will the city have to borrow money this year to get through a dry spell in revenues?

A. The city, because of declining income and declining reserves carried from one year to the next, may have a cash flow problem.

We are continually checking that, based on each month's income and expenditures, and it looks at the present time that it will not be necessary. Our low month is going to be October, before property taxes start coming in. As we have it projected out now, we will not have to borrow money.

If we have a major disaster or a fire truck blows up, those projections would have to be reanalyzed, but at the present time it does not appear we will have to borrow to meet cash flow needs.

I think the important thing is that is a balanced budget and there will be adaquate revenues to meet expenditures.

Q. Poplar Bluff has an approximate budget approximately twice the size of Sikeston, yet the city is nearly the same size. How can Sikeston operate on a $1.3 million budget and Poplar Bluff at over $3 million.

A. The difference basically is in the amount of capital improvements they are able to make. They are building a new viaduct that is much wider, which crosses the railroad area, they financed a major portion of it with sales tax. They purchased new fire trucks, they have put on additional firemen and improved conditions financially within the police department. They are providing levels of services that are not being provided in Sikeston due to a lack of money. It is a question of resources to meet a need.

If we want to proceed on a maintenance basis, which can be done, then we have adaquate income. However, if we want to proceed with substantial street construction programs, storm sewer construction programs, or if we want to have paved roads in the park system or an extremely high level of park maintanance, then it costs money.

I think the public judgment then becomes what level of service do we want?. Are we willing to pay "x" number of dollars more per year in order to have this?

I think in terms of the sales tax, judgment at the time was that they preferred to continue on with the basic service rather than to pay the additional amount required.

have a significance you would have to increase the property tax rate quite a bit. That would have to be voted by the people to determine if they would take on the additional tax burden.

Other sources include a cigarette tax. It could produce a approximately $60,000 additional income per year. The problem with it is that it is very difficult to administer. It is a very easy tax to avoid. You can just go some place else to buy your cigarettes. It is very difficult to administer, because you have to put a city cigarette stamp on all packs. It is a very cumbersome tax and has a very high administrative cost.

Auto stickers were recently increased and will produce approximately $20,000 additional income and that is the maximum the city can issue.

Utility franchise fees are right now five per cent. They are collected from City Light and Water, Southwestern Bell Telephone, Associated Natural Gas, Missouri Utilities and See-Mor Cable TV.

Five per cent is an average franchise fee.

The other source open is a sales tax which could be in terms of a half-cent or a full cent. There was an election on it last year and it failed. There is no specific program at the present time to place it again on the ballot.

Q. Will the city end up in the black or the red with the present revenue at the end of the year.

A. We had to cut back on this year's services. We were able to do less through a federal program, the public service employment program which provides several employes to the city at no cost, and a necessary reduction in the size of the police department.

We also had to reduce the size of the park maintenance department and also the street department.

Bloomfield board opposes amendment

BLOOMFIELD — The Board of Education Monday night went on record as being opposed to a proposed constitutional amendment, to be voted on Aug. 3.

The board unanimously opposed Amendment No. 7, which if approved would provide "services for the handicapped, secular textbooks and transportation to children attending public and nonpublic elementary and secondary schools on an equitable and nondiscrimatory basis."

Bob Forister, who recently was not rehired as elementary principal but retained as teacher under tenure, resigned. His resignation was accepted by the board.

It was reported that a bookkeeping machine has been purchased, a new suspended ceiling has been installed in the east wing of the elementary school, new furniture has been purchased for 10 elementary and 10 high school classrooms and a 16-passenger schoolbus has been purchased.

An administrative building has been set up at 406 Center St.

to comply with recommendations of the State Department of Education.

The property was purchased by the district two years ago, the building houses a meeting room for the board, the superintendent's office, bookkeeper's office, reception area and restrooms.

It was also reported that construction has started on the new high school library, and is progressing ahead of schedule.

Public wants city to explore possibilities for a community building

BERNIE — The public seems to think the city should explore the possibilities of constructing a community building with a $400,000 federal grant, if approved, Mayor R.B. Woods said today.

The community building was just one of several suggestions made by about 20 persons in attendance Tuesday night at a public hearing for citizen input.

Suggestions ranged from the community building—which the City Council also feels would be desirable—to a swimming pool, which was rejected because it was doubted if the Department of Housing and Urban Development, which administers the grants, would approve.

The proposed community building would possibly contain offices for governmental agencies, such as a drivers license bureau or Social Security office; a meeting room which could be used by the public; and kitchen facilities.

Woods said a number of teenagers also attended the meeting, who suggested that the community building include a new library, since the present one is a room at the City Hall and the city is about to outgrow it.

Estimated cost of the building would be $200,000.

The community building was also recommended by the City Council, but Woods said "We were not there to sell an idea, but to listen. We wanted to hear from the people."

Another public hearing will be held at a later date, to be set at a City Council meeting Monday night.

The two public hearings are required by law before the city can apply for the grant.

Other suggestions included: Additional water storage for the city at an estimated cost of $150,000; apply for $25,000 to $50,000 to be used as city administered loans for fixing up substandard homes; and installation of storm sewers.

Bernie now has no storm sewers, Woods said, and it was thought this would do more to upgrade city housing than anything else.

The proposal was to lay about two miles of the sewers in the central business and residential district. This would cost an estimated $175,000 to $200,000.

The $400,000 would be the maximum that could be approved. Woods said that in most cases HUD grants the whole request, but in some cases it has just granted part of the request.

Deadline to make the request is Nov. 1.

Representatives of C.R. Trotter and Associates of Dexter, a consulting firm acting as city engineers, were also present.

House is burglarized

CHARLESTON — A burglary at the Joe Holmes residence, reported at 10:10 a.m. Tuesday, is under investigation by police.

The home, located at 404 South Ninth Street, was entered through a utility room window on the east side.

New Family Planning Clinic is opened

Warren Manning, director of the Scott County Health Department, has announced the opening of a new Family Planning Clinic at the department's Sikeston branch office, 804 Tanner St. The clinic will be in operation on the first Monday of each month from 8:30 a.m. to noon.

Manning said the new clinic will allow the county health center to add a number of new patients to its family planning program.

Anyone interested in obtaining the clinic's services must make an appointment by calling telephone number 471-4044 or visit the office.

Sudie Quertermous

BENTON — Sudie Quertermous, 87, of Route One died at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Chaffee General Hospital.

She was born Oct. 25, 1888 to the late Henry and Helen Martin Wheeler in Crittenden County, Ky.

Surviving are: her widower, Charlie Quertermous; two sons, Howard Quertermous of Pontiac, Mich., and Harold Quertermous of Six Lakes, Mich.; and 17 grandchildren, 26 great-grandchildren and two great-great- grandchildren.

Friends may call after 2 p.m. today at Nunnelee Funeral Chapel in Sikeston, where services are scheduled at 1:30 p.m. Thursday. The Rev. Raymond Hannah of Fredericktown will officiate.

Burial will follow in Unity Cemetery near Benton.

J. M. Mitchell

PORTAGEVILLE — Masonic rites and graveside services for John Mayes Mitchell, 59, an accountant who died Sunday, were conducted at 10 a.m. today in the Portageville Cemetery. The Rev. David Richardson, pastor of the United Methodist Church, officiated, and DeLisle Funeral Home was in charge of arrangements.

Born June 4, 1917 in Portageville, he was a son of the late Oscar and Mayme Mayes Mitchell.

Mitchell initiated the annual Christmas party forFarmington State Hospital patients in 1960 and had remained active in raising funds and coordinating the event.

In 1973, he was paid tribute and received a citation from the Knights of Columbus Council in Portageville for his dedication and personal concern for others by making the Christmas party possible.

A memorial fund to continue the Farmington Christmas party has been established at Farmers Bank in Portageville.

He is survived by one brother, Ely Mitchell of Cape Girardeau, and an aunt, two uncles, two nephews and two nieces.

Virgil Decker

Virgil Decker, 73, 138 N. Handy St., died unexpectedly Monday at his home and the body was found Tuesday by a relative. Coroner Gene Nunnelee confirmed that the death was of natural causes.

He was born Jan. 31, 1903 in Lilbourn.

On Sept. 6, 1941, he married Hazel Reno, who preceded him in death in 1967.

He was a retired employe of Welsh Baby Carriage Co. in St. Louis.

Friends may call after 5 p.m. today at O'Guinn Funeral Home, where services are scheduled at 2 p.m. Thursday.

Burial will follow in Forest Hills Memorial Gardens near Morley.

In further discussion Manning said that a semi-annual financial report would be presented to the board at the next meeting, Aug. 31, and then he presented a semi-annual report on services conducted by the department, which the board accepted.

Manning told board members he had notified Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau that the department would no longer be able to take part in the university's student nursing program, due to an increased workload and lack of personnel.

He said a secretary is needed at the Sikeston office, since telephone traffic has been consuming a lot of the nurse's time, which could be better spent handling patients.

He said the Home Health Agency, which is located in the same building as the health department in Sikeston, has been successful in obtaining a secretary by providing on-the-job-training under the WIN (Work Incentive) Program, which is federally and state funded and operated by the Department of Labor and the Division of Family Services.

The board agreed with Manning on the student nursing program and also approved the placement of a secretary under the WIN program.

Plane carrying 70 passengers, crew crashes

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A plane of the Czechoslovak CSA airline carrying 70 passengers and a crew of six crashed on a domestic flight from Prague to Bratislava today, the Czechoslovak news agency CTK said today.

Unconfirmed reports said the plane, probably a Soviet-built Ilyushin-18 with an experienced pilot at the controls, nose-dived near a lake of the Zlate Pisky (Golden Sands) recreational area.

CTK did not mention survivors, and it was feared there would be few if any.

The news agency in its domestic service said it received the crash report from the Communist party Central Committee.

Observers said the Central Committee's concern with the crash indicated a major death toll or that a top party official may have been aboard.

CTK said only that rescue operations were being carried out and an investigation was begun.

C'ville men are indicted

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A federal appeals court has reinstated indictments against two Caruthersville men accused of firearms violations.

The 8th U.S. Court of Appeals ruled in a split decision Tuesday that the indictments should be reinstated in spite of an 11-month delay between completion of a federal investigation and the indictments.

The delay, the court ruled, did not prejudice the cases of Noel Quinn and Lee Wilson.

Quinn was charged with 10 counts of violating firearms laws and Wilson with one count of dealing in firearms without a license.

A U.S. District judge had earlier dismissed the indictments because of the delay.

The indictments were for alleged violations that were committed in 1974.

Record number of voters to go to polls

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A record 1.25 million voters will go to the polls Tuesday in the state's primary election, Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick predicted today.

The predicted voter turnout, 52 per cent of those who have registered, would break the record of 1.03 million set in the 1936 primary and marks only the third time in state history when more than a million persons went to the polls.

The state's chief election official said the heated Democratic primary for the U. S. Senate nomination and controversy over a proposed constitutional amendment to permit limited state aid to private schools was responsible for the optimistic voter forecast.

He also noted that in the final three months of voter registration this year, more persons registered than during the first 16 months.

This is a healthy sign for participatory democracy," Kirkpatrick said. "We intend to continue urging the highest possible level of citizen involvement."

The projected 1.25 million voter turnout, however, represents only 37 per cent of the state's voting age population, Kirkpatrick said, although that percentage is higher than the participation in the 1972 primary.

While acknowledging his forecast is optimistic, Kirkpatrick pointed out that his forecast of voter turnout in 1974 was only 17,000 off and in 1972 only 4,300 off.

Gets new swimming pool

The Sikeston Regional Center for Developmentally Disabled, No. 1 Plaza Drive, is getting a new swimming pool to serve Sikeston area retarded and handicapped citizens. Organizations instrumental in providing funds for the swimming pool project are the Sikeston area CB Club, Keystone Class of First Christian Church and the Sikeston Jaycees. The CB Club donated $9,000, the Keystone Class $500, and the Jaycees $400. Pictured at the construction site, from left, are Nancy Lawrence, secretary- treasurer; Dr. B. G. Schoch, board of directors; David Ragan, director of the regional center; Bill Partin, board of directors; Bill Leonard, president of CB Club; Sandra Gish, board of directors; Slim Phillips, board of directors; Mildred Marks, treasurer of the Association of Retarded Citizens. All are members of the CB club except Ragan and Mrs. Marks. The pool will be 20 feet wide and 40 feet long. Minimum depth will be three feet and the maximum depth will be five feet. The wading pool will be eight feet in diameter and 12 inches deep. The project contract was awarded to Alan Craig Swimming Pools.

I would expect, unless there is some miracle, that next year we would be faced with increasing property taxes to support a specific level of services. That prediction could be effected by the rate of inflation and other things.

The council will be faced with a similar question next year in terms of "do we need to raise taxes to support what we have or do we need to cut back."

Q. What kind of cutbacks could we see next year?

A. Right now, I think it is too early to tell in terms of specific reductions because there are so many things that cannot be determined right now. The biggest single cost to the city and to most businesses is salaries. What inflation does this year, will determine largely the increase in next year's budget.

Q. Will the city have to borrow money this year to get through a dry spell in revenues?

A. The city, because of declining income and declining reserves carried from one year to the next, may have a cash flow problem.

We are continually checking that, based on each month's income and expenditures, and it looks at the present time that it will not be necessary. Our low month is going to be October, before property taxes start coming in. As we have it projected out now, we will not have to borrow money.

If we have a major disaster or a fire truck blows up, those projections would have to be reanalyzed, but at the present time it does not appear we will have to borrow to meet cash flow needs.

I think the important thing is that is a balanced budget and there will be adaquate revenues to meet expenditures.

Q. Poplar Bluff has an approximate budget approximately twice the size of Sikeston, yet the city is nearly the same size. How can Sikeston operate on a $1.3 million budget and Poplar Bluff at over $3 million.

A. The difference basically is in the amount of capital improvements they are able to make. They are building a new viaduct that is much wider, which crosses the railroad area, they financed a major portion of it with sales tax. They purchased new fire trucks, they have put on additional firemen and improved conditions financially within the police department. They are providing levels of services that are not being provided in Sikeston due to a lack of money. It is a question of resources to meet a need.

If we want to proceed on a maintenance basis, which can be done, then we have adaquate income. However, if we want to proceed with substantial street construction programs, storm sewer construction programs, or if we want to have paved roads in the park system or an extremely high level of park maintanance, then it costs money.

I think the public judgment then becomes what level of service do we want?. Are we willing to pay "x" number of dollars more per year in order to have this?

I think in terms of the sales tax, judgment at the time was that they preferred to continue on with the basic service rather than to pay the additional amount required.

have a significance you would have to increase the property tax rate quite a bit. That would have to be voted by the people to determine if they would take on the additional tax burden.

Other sources include a cigarette tax. It could produce a approximately $60,000 additional income per year. The problem with it is that it is very difficult to administer. It is a very easy tax to avoid. You can just go some place else to buy your cigarettes. It is very difficult to administer, because you have to put a city cigarette stamp on all packs. It is a very cumbersome tax and has a very high administrative cost.

Auto stickers were recently increased and will produce approximately $20,000 additional income and that is the maximum the city can issue.

Utility franchise fees are right now five per cent. They are collected from City Light and Water, Southwestern Bell Telephone, Associated Natural Gas, Missouri Utilities and See-Mor Cable TV.

Five per cent is an average franchise fee.

The other source open is a sales tax which could be in terms of a half-cent or a full cent. There was an election on it last year and it failed. There is no specific program at the present time to place it again on the ballot.

Q. Will the city end up in the black or the red with the present revenue at the end of the year.

A. We had to cut back on this year's services. We were able to do less through a federal program, the public service employment program which provides several employes to the city at no cost, and a necessary reduction in the size of the police department.

We also had to reduce the size of the park maintenance department and also the street department.

Farm Roundup

Land use emerges as important item on nation's agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Land use is emerging as one of the most important items on the nation's agenda, particularly at the state and local levels where people are able to see for themselves the effects of urban sprawl and other demands of society, the Agriculture Department says.

For the immediate future, at least over the next 25 years, department experts say farmers will have ample land to produce food and fiber for American consumers and to meet anticipated export demands.

But the USDA has lately been stressing, often in a low-key manner, what it sees as a greater urgency for federal, state and local governments, citizen's groups and individuals to take substantive steps toward land-use policy.

Some USDA officials, particularly the career professionals, have said privately for some time that sooner or later some kind of national land use policy and perhaps federal-state regulation may evolve. But for now the mention of possible national legislation to manage how land is bought, sold and used is only a whisper.

Melvin L. Cotner, director of the natural resource economic division in the USDA's Economic Research Service, says there is little agreement on how far public policy should go to maintain private farms.

In a report today, Cotner examines future U.S. agricultural production capacity with an eye on patterns of land use. Generally, he is optimistic that there will be enough land to feed Americans, with some left over to help other countries.

"But assuring an adequate national food and fiber supply is by no means the only reason to consider policies to preserve agricultural lands," Cotner said. "There are also concerns over suburban sprawl, aesthetics, recreation, air and water quality, and the future viability of agriculturally based communities."

Farmers have boosted total food output 50 per cent since 1950 by relying more on machinery, fertilizer and other technology instead of adding more land and labor. Cotner and others question whether this trend will continue. The energy situation, among others, remains a bothersome unknown factor when trying to predict future farm output.

Cotner said the nation's cropland base is currently about 385 million acres, nearly as large as a 50-year high of 387 million acres in 1949. The crop base dropped to 333 million acres in 1969 in a period when the government paid farmers to idle land as a curb against surpluses.

With growing world demand for food and fiber and in the absence of federal supply management programs, "farmers are edging toward the upper limits of the cropland readily available for use," Cotner said.

But he also points out that there is much additional land which could be brought into crop production within a few years if demands are such that farmers had the incentive to do so. About one-half of the potential is in the Great Plains and much of it is now in pastures.

"If we assume that 100 million acres can be brought into production by 1985, grain sorghum acreage could increase twofold, cotton and citrus acreage could increase by two-thirds, wheat by more than half, soybeans by one-third and corn by 20 per cent," Cotner said.

The U.S. Soil Conservation Service, which is mapping the nation's "prime" farmland to aid in assessing inventories, says about 24 million highly productive acres could be used for crops simply by plowing and planting them. In all, the agency says about 111 million acres could be added to the crop base.

Meanwhile, Cotner says that city sprawl and other non-agricultural demands are gobbling up about 2.7 million acres of farm land a year. Much of this has been in areas south and east of the Midwest Corn Belt and includes land not well-suited to crops, he said.

At the same time, Cotner said, about 1.3 million acres of new crop land has been added each year through expanded irrigation, drainage, land-clearing and development of dryland farming, meaning a net farm land loss of about 1.4 million acres annually. Of that, urban encroachment is taking about 500,000 acres a year.

"While large, the loss to urban development is not extremely significant when compared to the existing cropland base of 385 million acres," Cotner said. "We develop more new cropland each year than we lose to urban development.

"But, this loss can be significant in local areas," Cotner said. "Moreover, urban areas tend to compete for the better agricultural lands and these conversions tend to be permanent."

Cotner said that perhaps the most compelling justification for concern about land use is from state and local perspective since the effects of farmland takeover for other purposes "are not readily apparent when viewing the situation from the national vantage point."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Meat output in key world production areas, including the United States, is expected to climb three per cent this year and possibly more if the European drought stimulates extensive livestock slaughter, the Agriculture Department said today.

In the major exporting countries, including Australia, New Zealand and Argentina, beef and veal production is expected to rise 11 per cent from last year, the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said.

"Thus, the exporting nations this year are again seeking markets outside their usual outlets for beef and veal," the report said.

One of the largest potential "non-traditional markets" is the Soviet Union which some trade sources have said might import as much as 600,000 metric tons of meat this year. But the report said that so far actual sales to Russia have been small.

Beef and veal production in the European Common Market countries is expected to decline five per cent from 1975, while pork and poultry output is expected to increase, the report said. However, those forecasts could change "in view of the continuing European drought" and an increase in livestock slaughter.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Health Insurance Institute estimates a record $32.9 billion in benefits was paid out in 1975 by private health insurers in the United States.

The institute said its figures showed an 18.4 per cent increase over the $27.8 billion paid out in 1974.

Self-help groups are booming

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — The self-help groups that are booming across the country are getting a little help themselves — from a new institute established to study the trend.

"Suddenly out of the woodwork you get these little groups nobody ever heard about," said Dr. Leonard D. Borman, director of the Self-Help Institute, affiliated with the Center for Urban Affairs at Northwestern University.

Borman, an anthropologist, said the institute plans to gather data about self-help groups and provide training and a clearinghouse for information to help the groups become more effective.

No one knows how many self-help groups there are, although some estimates place the figure at a half-million tax-exempt organizations.

Alcoholics Anonymous, which Borman calls "the grandaddy of self-help organizations," was founded in 1935 and is estimated to have 800,000 members. In the decade from 1962 to 1972, the number of AA chapters doubled — from 9,000 to 18,000. Borman says.

Recovery, Inc., an association of nervous and former mental patients, was established in 1937 and now has 15,000 members meeting weekly for mutual support in 1,000 groups in the United States, Canada, Puerto Rico and Ireland.

The development and growth of Synanon, which Borman says has had "a remarkable impact on drug addiction," reflects concern over a comparatively recently social problem. It was formed in 1958 by a former AA member.

Other groups include such organizations as Parents Anonymous, made up of parents who have abused their children; Gamblers Anonymous, for those trying to overcome that problem; TOPS — Take Off Pounds Sensibly — a weight-reduction organization; the Fortune Society, made up of former convicts; and Reach to Recovery, for women who have had mastectomies.

The growth of health-related self-help groups has been a striking development over the past decade, Borman said.

He noted that Mended Hearts, a national group for persons who had had heart surgery, is growing at the rate of 200 new members a month.

Other organizations include the blind, the deaf, arthritics and cancer patients who share their anxieties and concerns with each other and offer encouragement and support.

Borman said a different type of self-help group is represented by the food-buying clubs formed by consumers to save money.

There also are groups for widows, new mothers who breast-feed, homosexuals and the elderly. Women's consciousness-raising organizations fall into the category of self-help.

"These groups seem to have the key to problems their people face," Borman said.

One common characteristic they share, he said, is that they were developed outside of established institutions. Their development, in part, represents an antiprofessional attitude, he added.

"Many persons who participate in these groups want help from somebody who has been down the line," Borman said.

Land use emerges as important item on nation's agenda

WASHINGTON (AP) — Land use is emerging as one of the most important items on the nation's agenda, particularly at the state and local levels where people are able to see for themselves the effects of urban sprawl and other demands of society, the Agriculture Department says.

For the immediate future, at least over the next 25 years, department experts say farmers will have ample land to produce food and fiber for American consumers and to meet anticipated export demands.

But the USDA has lately been stressing, often in a low-key manner, what it sees as a greater urgency for federal, state and local governments, citizen's groups and individuals to take substantive steps toward land-use policy.

Some USDA officials, particularly the career professionals, have said privately for some time that sooner or later some kind of national land use policy and perhaps federal-state regulation may evolve. But for now the mention of possible national legislation to manage how land is bought, sold and used is only a whisper.

Melvin L. Cotner, director of the natural resource economic division in the USDA's Economic Research Service, says there is little agreement on how far public policy should go to maintain private farms.

In a report today, Cotner examines future U.S. agricultural production capacity with an eye on patterns of land use. Generally, he is optimistic that there will be enough land to feed Americans, with some left over to help other countries.

"But assuring an adequate national food and fiber supply is by no means the only reason to consider policies to preserve agricultural lands," Cotner said. "There are also concerns over suburban sprawl, aesthetics, recreation, air and water quality, and the future viability of agriculturally based communities."

Farmers have boosted total food output 50 per cent since 1950 by relying more on machinery, fertilizer and other technology instead of adding more land and labor. Cotner and others question whether this trend will continue. The energy situation, among others, remains a bothersome unknown factor when trying to predict future farm output.

Cotner said the nation's cropland base is currently about 385 million acres, nearly as large as a 50-year high of 387 million acres in 1949. The crop base dropped to 333 million acres in 1969 in a period when the government paid farmers to idle land as a curb against surpluses.

Four American boxers win

U.S. cagers bring home gold

MONTREAL (AP) — It was no contest. If it had been a fight, they'd have stopped it.

Perhaps the most eagerly-awaited sports event in the past four years was a rout, a one-sided run-away, an anti-climax.

In fact, the United States' emotional, 95-74 basketball victory over Yugoslavia for the Olympic gold medal was assured so quickly, so easily, the television cameras beaming coverage to the United States cut away on a more or less regular basis to focus on men's platform diving and boxing quarter-finals.

But it was the big one, the event the United States wanted to win in these XXI Olympic Games. The youngest team the United States has ever fielded wiped out the memory of Munich and the only Olympic game it had ever lost. It was an inspired performance that restored the team to amateur supremacy in the game the Americans invented.

Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame scored eight of his game-high 30 points in the first six minutes. The United States built a 20-8 lead in that time and from then on it was not a matter of "who" but "by how much."

Some of the edge may have been taken off the triumph because it came against Yugoslavia, not Russia, the team that scored that controversial decision over the United States four years ago.

The Russians didn't make it to the final. Instead, they had to settle for a 100-72 victory over Canada last night and the bronze.

But the absence of the Russians didn't bother Coach Dean Smith or his players at all.

"I guess a lot of people are disappointed we didn't play the Russians," said guard Quinn Buckner of Indiana. "I didn't care who we had to beat. I just wanted that big piece of gold."

"I was so happy at the presentation ceremony, there were tears in my eyes," said Smith.

"I thought we deserved that ovation we receive," said Scott May, Indiana's All American. "A lot of people didn't think we could do it. I think the American people should be grateful for the job we've done."

And it was a job that needed doing. It was the only gold medal the Americans have acquired in the past two days.

With the United States picking up only eight medals in the last two days, they now are far behind Russia. The Russians have a 29-29-22 count in gold, silver and bronze, 80 over-all. East Germany is 28-18-16, for 62 total. The United States is 22-25-18, 65 total.

Some gains were made, however. Four American boxers advanced to the semifinals, where they're assured of at least a bronze. Four other fighters are in action tonight and all have a good chance of reaching the semis. The United States won only two boxing medals in 1972.

World champion Darrell Pace, a 19-year-old Air Force technician from Cincinnati, had a solid, 16-point lead after the first day of archery competition.

The United States also can expect a silver or bronze yachting medal from Hawaiians David McFaull and Michael Rothwell in today's final race of the Tornado Class. They were in second place after the first six races but had no chance at the gold, already clinched by Great Britain.

Kison pitches and hits Pirates to 3-1 victory over punchless Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For a pitcher with a .141 lifetime average, the Pittsburgh Pirates' Bruce Kison was adopting a serious stance toward hitting.

"I tried to take advantage of my speed and the fact they were playing in," Kison explained Tuesday night after contributing to a 3-1 defeat of the St. Louis Cardinals with his bat.

"In '72 I led the team with hitting and I had 13 RBI," he maintained in the absence of record books that could be consulted to repudiate his claim.

"Last year I was a little bit disappointed," added the birdishly built right-hander. "It wasn't that I didn't try. I went out there swinging for home runs, which is a lot of fun to do but not very realistic."

Kison, who began the night batting .188 for the season, watched the Cards glean 10 of the game's 12 hits until he led off the Pirates' eighth in a 1-1 tie.

In the final inning, after Manny Sanguillen had singled and advanced to second on Don Kessinger's throwing error, Kison insured the Pittsburgh triumph by punching an RBI single through a drawn-in infield.

"I've always been serious about my hitting," contended Kison, who until the late action had been more concerned about what St. Louis hitters were doing to his pitches.

"It was a long evening," he conceded of an 11-hitter made even more arduous by three Cards singles in each the first and fifth innings.

"It would have been longer, but we had some good fielding plays," he added. "There were a lot of big plays. I could have been showered and dressed in the second inning."

Lou Brock walked, stole second, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Bake McBride's sacrifice fly in the opening inning before the St. Louis attack began.

But a Ted Simmons single which struck baserunner Willie Crawford on the foot foiled additional Cards scoring in the first and Stennett leaped high at second base to spear a Simmons line drive and start a double play repelling a basesloaded, none-out St. Louis threat in the fifth.

"When you look back there were a lot of things that went our way," acknowledged Kison, 8-6, the winner over Falcone, 6-11, who departed following the Pirates pitcher's first single with a slightly pulled neck muscle.

"He pitched a great game," Kison said of Falcone. "I know how he felt. I've had a few like that myself."

Little League tourneys continue despite rain; all games completed

Twelve was the magic number in the Musial League. Close games were the rule in the American. And, both National League games were won by a nine- run margin as the Sikeston Little League defied the weather and got six games in under threatening conditions as opening round action in the league tournaments continued.

MUSIAL LEAGUE

Buchanan and Templeton combined on a two-hitter as Rotary belted Harts Bread 12-2. McRoy had a double and a pair of singles in four trips for Rotary.

Bank of Sikeston also scored 12 times, beating Kingsway 12-6 in the Musial nightcap. Kingsway actually outhit the Bank eight to seven and Bank hurler Price was three-for-three, but the Bank of Sikeston scored twice as many times to pick up the win.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Nunnelee scored two runs in the first extrainning, then held Ziegenhorn to just one, winning an overtime game 9-8. Two hit batters and singles by Pearson and Butler contributed to the Nunnelee rally.

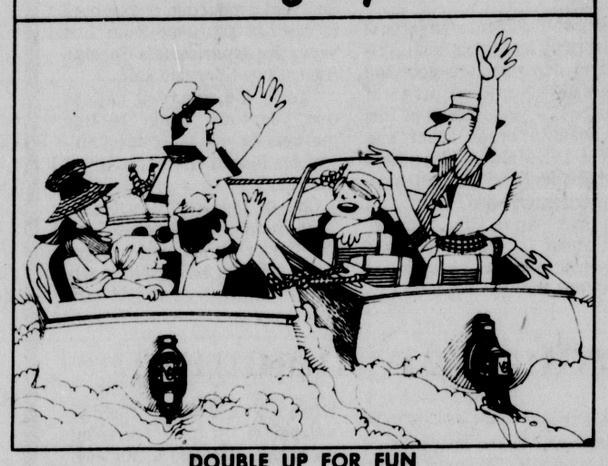
First National outslugged Fabick 17-14 in the second game. Tolbert was four- for- four with two doubles for First National. A ten-run first boosted First National to the win.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Each team won by nine runs in the two National League games. The first saw Pizza Inn beat Lions 15-6 on a four-hitter by Mike Moore. A seven-run fifth inning put the win away for the Inn. Moore was a perfect three-for- three with a double and a walk.

Then, Legion bested Jaycees 16-7. Legion scored in every inning, taking advantage of seven Jaycees errors. Shawn McClain ripped a home run for the winners.

Boating Tips...



DOUBLE UP FOR FUN

Two families with different boats can find a weekend cruise doubled in pleasure simply because they have the combined capability of water skiing, fishing, cruising and exploring. Limitations of one boat are offset by advantages of the other. Time can certainly be put to better use. And safety is also enhanced, say the MerCruiser stern drive people. When it is necessary to cross an open stretch of water, it is comforting to have another boat nearby. A pair of boating families can always pitch in and help one another out to make the boating experience more pleasant.

Saints-Capahas showdown set for tonight here

"It IS the game of the year," is the consensus opinion of tonight's 8 p.m. game between the Bi-State league- leaders, the Cape Girardeau Capahas, and the Sikeston Saints. Cape leads the league by a goodly margin with a record of 12-4, but the Saints are the only team with even a remote shot at topping them. Sikeston, with a record of 9-6, would need to sweep the three games left between the two.

Hurling for Cape will be fireballing lefthander Trae Hastings, the 1976 M. V. P. for SEMO State University during the MIAA conference season. The diminutive hurler hasn't lost a Bi-State contest this year, but neither has his hurling counterpart from Sikeston. Saints righthander Don Miller is 3-0 with an ERA of 1.12.

The playoffs aren't assured yet for the Sikeston squad, despite a ten- game winning streak that was broken Sunday. Eight of those ten wins were in conference games, but three teams are still within striking distance of the Saints.

Ste. Senevieve, the team that blanked Sikeston by a 3-0 count, possesses the best hitting in the league and, when they get hurling like they received from Don Buechting, they are as tough as anyone. They own two victories over Cape.

Perryville, struggling with an 8-11 mark, is the defending league championship team, but they are a longshot at best.

Anna is the only other team with any playoff aspirations and they appear to have given up the chase. The Fuzzies, league leaders early in the season, have slumped of late and apparently are going to concentrate on their chances for standing in the Illinois Coal Belt League, since they also are members there. Anna dropped an 18-0 decision to Cape last Thursday as Hastings reportedly hurled a no-hitter.

A good crowd is anticipated for tonight's match-up at V. F. W. Stadium. The two talented hurlers, combined with the obvious affect the game will have on the league standings should draw onlookers.

The first meeting got a bit out of hand as Cape finally prevailed 17-10. Ken Detring was the winning pitcher.

"We've come a long way since then," says Saints manager Tom Masterson. "But, there's a lot of pressure. We can't afford to lose at all and Cape is tough."

Tuesday night's game between the Saints and Herrin was rained out. It was the fourth postponement of that particular game.

1ST Rick eisenbach, 3b(.419)
2ND Bill Schatzley, 2B (.313)

Eagles shake up SFSL standings

The Eagles knocked Steward Steel out of a first place tie and in the meantime tied the same team for second place last night by taking a 4-2 victory in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League.

The Eagles trailed 2-1 going into the seventh inning, but came up with three runs, including two that scored on an infield hit. While Steward players argued over a close call at first place, the Eagles runner on second came home to score

Both Steward Steel and the Eagles now have 11-5 records and are a half game behind league- leading Marks Food Mart, who are 12-5.

Tommy Green belted a double, a triple and a home for the 76'ers scored four times in the first inning and added four more in the fifth. Tom Stinnett was the winning hurler, while Don Cook got the loss.

INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT REVENUE BOND ISSUE

AT THE PRIMARY ELECTION

TUESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1976

THIS BOND ISSUE IS TO FINANCE CONSTRUCTION OF A NEW FACILITY FOR

DEKALB AgRESEARCH, INC.

HOW WILL THE BONDS BE PAID OFF?

The total amount of the bonds will be paid off by DEKALB AgResearch Inc. at the end of a specified period during which time the bonds will not constitute a Debt or obligation of the City of Sikeston.

WILL THIS REVENUE BOND ISSUE INCREASE MY TAXES?

No! The bond issue will be paid off entirely by DEKALB Inc. and there is absolutely no obligation on the part of the tax payer.

IS IT COMMON FOR CITIES TO ISSUE BONDS FOR INDUSTRIAL PROJECTS OUTSIDE THE CITY LIMITS?

Yes! The constitutional amendment passed in 1960 did not limit bond financing to industrial developments within the corporate limits of a city. An example of this is the $95 million bond issued passed by the City of New Madrid in 1968 for construction of the Noranda Aluminum facility several miles south of that city. The City of Bloomfield, Missouri recently authorized $2.5 million revenue bond issue to construct the Southern Clay plant eight miles north of town.

WHY DOES SIKESTON NEED THE DEKALB PROJECT?

No community can stand still. It either must move forward or backward. The only way to move forward is thru the creation of more payroll and the best way to create more payroll is through the expansion of existing industry and the attraction of new industry. DEKALB will ultimately generate an estimated $2,000,000 in payroll each year and this added payroll will have a positive impact on Sikeston's growth.

U.S. cagers bring home gold

MONTREAL (AP) — It was no contest. If it had been a fight, they'd have stopped it.

Perhaps the most eagerly-awaited sports event in the past four years was a rout, a one-sided run-away, an anti-climax.

In fact, the United States' emotional, 95-74 basketball victory over Yugoslavia for the Olympic gold medal was assured so quickly, so easily, the television cameras beaming coverage to the United States cut away on a more or less regular basis to focus on men's platform diving and boxing quarter-finals.

But it was the big one, the event the United States wanted to win in these XXI Olympic Games. The youngest team the United States has ever fielded wiped out the memory of Munich and the only Olympic game it had ever lost. It was an inspired performance that restored the team to amateur supremacy in the game the Americans invented.

Adrian Dantley of Notre Dame scored eight of his game-high 30 points in the first six minutes. The United States built a 20-8 lead in that time and from then on it was not a matter of "who" but "by how much."

Some of the edge may have been taken off the triumph because it came against Yugoslavia, not Russia, the team that scored that controversial decision over the United States four years ago.

The Russians didn't make it to the final. Instead, they had to settle for a 100-72 victory over Canada last night and the bronze.

But the absence of the Russians didn't bother Coach Dean Smith or his players at all.

"I guess a lot of people are disappointed we didn't play the Russians," said guard Quinn Buckner of Indiana. "I didn't care who we had to beat. I just wanted that big piece of gold."

"I was so happy at the presentation ceremony, there were tears in my eyes," said Smith.

"I thought we deserved that ovation we receive," said Scott May, Indiana's All American. "A lot of people didn't think we could do it. I think the American people should be grateful for the job we've done."

And it was a job that needed doing. It was the only gold medal the Americans have acquired in the past two days.

With the United States picking up only eight medals in the last two days, they now are far behind Russia. The Russians have a 29-29-22 count in gold, silver and bronze, 80 over-all. East Germany is 28-18-16, for 62 total. The United States is 22-25-18, 65 total.

Some gains were made, however. Four American boxers advanced to the semifinals, where they're assured of at least a bronze. Four other fighters are in action tonight and all have a good chance of reaching the semis. The United States won only two boxing medals in 1972.

World champion Darrell Pace, a 19-year-old Air Force technician from Cincinnati, had a solid, 16-point lead after the first day of archery competition.

The United States also can expect a silver or bronze yachting medal from Hawaiians David McFaull and Michael Rothwell in today's final race of the Tornado Class. They were in second place after the first six races but had no chance at the gold, already clinched by Great Britain.

Kison pitches and hits Pirates to 3-1 victory over punchless Cards

"I tried to take advantage of my speed and the fact they were playing in," Kison explained Tuesday night after contributing to a 3-1 defeat of the St. Louis Cardinals with his bat.

"In '72 I led the team with hitting and I had 13 RBI," he maintained in the absence of record books that could be consulted to repudiate his claim.

"Last year I was a little bit disappointed," added the birdishly built right-hander. "It wasn't that I didn't try. I went out there swinging for home runs, which is a lot of fun to do but not very realistic."

Kison, who began the night batting .188 for the season, watched the Cards glean 10 of the game's 12 hits until he led off the Pirates' eighth in a 1-1 tie.

In the final inning, after Manny Sanguillen had singled and advanced to second on Don Kessinger's throwing error, Kison insured the Pittsburgh triumph by punching an RBI single through a drawn-in infield.

"I've always been serious about my hitting," contended Kison, who until the late action had been more concerned about what St. Louis hitters were doing to his pitches.

"It was a long evening," he conceded of an 11-hitter made even more arduous by three Cards singles in each the first and fifth innings.

"It would have been longer, but we had some good fielding plays," he added. "There were a lot of big plays. I could have been showered and dressed in the second inning."

Lou Brock walked, stole second, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Bake McBride's sacrifice fly in the opening inning before the St. Louis attack began.

But a Ted Simmons single which struck baserunner Willie Crawford on the foot foiled additional Cards scoring in the first and Stennett leaped high at second base to spear a Simmons line drive and start a double play repelling a basesloaded, none-out St. Louis threat in the fifth.

"When you look back there were a lot of things that went our way," acknowledged Kison, 8-6, the winner over Falcone, 6-11, who departed following the Pirates pitcher's first single with a slightly pulled neck muscle.

"He pitched a great game," Kison said of Falcone. "I know how he felt. I've had a few like that myself."

Nelson's homer topples Nowell

Nelson, who also had a single and a double in the game, connected for the game- winning blow off Kerry Northcutt, who went all the way for Nowell despite the big score. Jeff Schwabb, who followed Clinton Malcolm and Steven Burgess to the mound for Davis and Bird, got credit for the victory.

Russell Deal also had a big stick for Davis and Bird ripping two doubles and two singles. Johnny Longstreet had three doubles and a single for the losers, while Kevin Nowell went three- for- three.

Scott Campbell ripped two doubles and a triple and teammate Jeff Young added three singles as Home Materials ripped the Eagles 9-2. The victory clinched first place in the league for Home Materials for the second year in a row.

Home Materials scored three runs in each of the fourth, fifth and sixth innings to make a winner out of Campbell, who also handled the pitching chores for the winnes, firing a four-hitter. The Eagles had single tallies in the fourth and sixth. Eddie Wasson absorbed the loss.

All-Stars & Aces are selected for Little League

Rosters for the five post-season tournament teams in the Sikeston Little League have been selected by league coaches and were announced today by commissioner Mike Foster.

Sikeston's first tournament competition will be this Friday night as both the National League All-Stars and Aces and the Musial League All-Stars will compete in the Scott City Invitational Tournament.

Foster also announced that this Thursday night will be trophy night at the complex. Trophies will be presented to both the league winners and to the tournament winners in each circuit. In addition, the All-Star teams will be introduced in each league.

13-year-old play is rescheduled

DEXTER — Both games scheduled for last night in the State 13- Year- Old Junior Babe Ruth League Tournament at Dexter were rained out.

Tournament director Charles Felker of Dexter has announced a revised schedule for the remainder of the tournament.

Both games scheduled for last night, Sikeston vs. Lebanon and Jefferson City vs. Kirksville, will be played tonight, with games starting at 6:00 and 8:00. Games 5, 6 and 7 will be played Thursday evening, starting at 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30. Games 8 and 9 are set for Friday evening at 6:00 and 8:00. Championship action will take place Saturday afternoon, with the loser's bracket winner meeting the undefeated team at 12:30. If necessary, the second game would be played at 2:30.

Tonight, Sikeston's All-Stars meet Lebanon at 6:00. Sikeston nipped Carthage 7-6 in the opening round Monday evening, while Lebanon drew a bye. Kirksville, which defeated Dexter 9-1 Monday evening, meets Jefferson City at 8:00 in the other win-n'ers bracket contest. Loser's bracket play gets under way Thursday evening.

Nelson's homer topples Nowell

Nelson, who also had a single and a double in the game, connected for the game-winning blow off Kerry Northcutt, who went all the way for Nowell despite the big score. Jeff Schwabb, who followed Clinton Malcolm and Steven Burgess to the mound for Davis and Bird, got credit for the victory.

Russell Deal also had a big stick for Davis and Bird ripping two doubles and two singles. Johnny Longstreet had three doubles and a single for the losers, while Kevin Nowell went three- for- three.

Scott Campbell ripped two doubles and a triple and teammate Jeff Young added three singles as Home Materials ripped the Eagles 9-2. The victory clinched first place in the league for Home Materials for the second year in a row.

Home Materials scored three runs in each of the fourth, fifth and sixth innings to make a winner out of Campbell, who also handled the pitching chores for the winnes, firing a four-hitter. The Eagles had single tallies in the fourth and sixth. Eddie Wasson absorbed the loss.

Missouri's shaky status due to to New Madrid quakes

ROLLA — For settlers in the Bootheel of Missouri, Dec. 16, 1811, was a night of terror.

Violent earthquakes racked Southeast Missouri and neighboring states. Eyewitnesses told of the ground rising and falling like waves in the sea, opening up in deep cracks, of landslides and large areas that sank and were covered with water escaping from fissures, of whole islands that disappeared in the Mississippi River. The area was devastated.

The quakes shook more than two-thirds of the continental United States and caused major topographic changes over an area of 50,000 square miles. These quakes and those that followed over a period of about 13 months have been generally regarded as the worst to have occurred on the North American continent.

The cause of it all was shifting along the New Madrid fault, buried deep beneath the alluvial soil of the Central Mississippi River Valley. Because of this, Southeast Missouri and contiguous areas of neighboring states are in a high risk seismic zone. An additional surrounding area is in a zone of expected moderate damage, and the rest of the state is in a minor risk zone.

At the University of Missouri-Rolla scientists and engineers are involved in studies of Missouri's seismic activities in two general fields. Geologists and geophysicists study and teach the geology of the area.

UMR's Geophysical Observatory, under the direction of Dr. Gerald Rupert, continuously monitors seismic occurrences all over the world, with special attention to quakes such as those of last March 23 which shook parts of Missouri. And structural engineers at Rolla study how earthquakes affect structures and how to design structures that will withstand earthquake motions.

Dr. Franklin Cheng, Rolla professor of civil engineering, is an expert on earthquake engineering and researcher on the effects of earthquakes on structures. He is director of an international symposium on earthquake structure engineering scheduled Aug. 19-21 at Stouffer's Riverfront Inn in St. Louis. It is sponsored by UMR and the National Science Foundation.

The conference will bring together more than 100 of the world's most outstanding earthquake scientists and engineers. Among them are researchers from 20 countries including Russia, Japan, India, Rumania, Greece, Turkey and the Republic of China.

They will present papers on such themes as codes and regulations; building, bridges, nuclear power plant facilities and other structures; analysis and design techniques; construction and repair of structures; foundation and structure interaction; and dynamic behavior of structures.

According to Cheng, St. Louis is a logical place for such a symposium. It is the largest city close to the New Madrid earthquake zone. It is in an area which might expect moderate damage from earthquakes, and, like the rest of Missouri, it has no enforced earthquake building code.

The professor hopes that forums such as the symposium will heighten interest in development of such codes.

"One of the main objectives of the conference is to get people together -- government officials, educators, researchers, engineers and contractors – to consider the basic issues of the earthquake problem. Because of the infrequency of earthquakes in Missouri, we tend to overlook the potential problems," he says.

A first step, he states, would be enforcing national standards and guidelines. Ultimately, he believes, there probably should be a state building code. But he questions whether Missouri needs the stringent regulations of states like California where quakes are more frequent and more severe.

"At this point, I doubt I can make any strong recommendations," Cheng adds. "However, I believe that we should study in depth and come up with conclusions which would be reasonable and acceptable for this state."

When these recommendations are made, Cheng's research funded by NSF, will provide a solid base of information on why and how structures collapse in earthquakes and how to build structures that will withstand earthquake motion.

His investigations are concerned with several areas, but essentially center on developing computer methods of analyzing earthquake structures and seeking the optimum design for these structures (Cheng explains that the term "structure" refers not only to buildings but such things as dams and bridges.)

In a related area, Cheng hopes to work with Rupert and others in another research project studying the sites upon which structures will be built to determine the response of the site to earthquakes.

Statistically, it has been estimated that Missouri should be due for another major earthquake about "every 400 years, give or take 300 years or so." In the meantime, Cheng, Rupert and others will continue their studies to understand earthquakes and their effects on structures and to develop guidelines for building structures that willwithstand these quakes, if and when they come.

Youngest college president to address graduates

CAPE GIRARDEAU--A man who was once the youngest president of a four-year liberal arts college in the United States will address the summer graduation class Aug. 7 at Southeast Missouri State University.

The speaker will be Dr. Gus Turbeville, who at age 30 in 1953 was appointed president of Northland College in Ashland, Wis. Dr. Turbeville is currently president of Emerson College in Boston, Mass.

Beginning the commencement activities at Southeast Missouri State will be the taraditional Alumni Reception for members of the graduating class, their families and friends, and the faculty and staff of the university. The reception will be from 4:30-5:30 p.m. in the University Center.

The terraces east of Academic Hall, the university's administration building, will be the setting for the commencement ceremonies at 6:30 p.m. In the case of rain or threatening weather, the exercises will be held in Houck Field House.

This summer's class is almost evenly divided between graduate and undergraduate students. One hundred and seventy-two undergrauduate degrees will be awarded while 154 graduate students will receive either master's or specialist degrees.

The commencement speaker will be introduced by Dr. Robert Leestamper, president of Southeast Missouri State.

Dr. Turbeville became president of Emerson College in June of last year. Prior to that he spend a year as a visiting professor of sociology at Worcester State College in Worecester, Mass., having stepped down in 1974 after five years as president of Coker College in Hartsville, S.C.

A South Carolina native, the commencement speaker earned his bachelor of arts degree in 1944 at Vanderbilt Universitv where he played varsity football and baseball. In 1946 he received his master of arts degree at Louisiana State University and in 1948, at age 25, he was awarded his Ph.D. degree from Michigan State University.

He embarked upon his career in education that same year at the University of Wisconsin--Duluth where he organized and headed the sociology department. Five years later, he was chosen president of Northland College. In 1958 he was named one of the Ten Outstanding Young Men in America by the Jaycees, and he was subsequently featured in Time Magazine as one of America's distinguished educators.

Dr. Turbeville left the presidency of Northland College in 1961, served briefly as the president of a foundation, then became professor and head of the department of sociology at the University of Wisconsin-Superior.

In 1969 he became president of Coker College. During his tenure there, enrollment doubled, the retention rate of students tripled, endowment increased 40 per cent, and gifts and grants increased 10-fold.

Dr. Turbeville is the author of two books and he has published numerous articles in various periodicals and presented papers to members of five sociological associations.

Having a keen interest in cartoons and comic strips, he is on the Board of Directors of the Museum of Cartoon Art in Greenwich, Conn.

He married the former Joanne Beverly Johnson of Duluth, Minn., and they are the parents of two sons and a daughter.

Swinging Along With Peter DeVries

I HEAR AMERICA SWINGING. By Peter DeVries. Little, Brown. 211 Pages. $7.95.

Where, you wonder, does Peter DeVries get those zany titles for his books: "Comfort Me With Apples," "The Vale of Laughter," "Without A Stitch In Time."

Well, for his latest merry satire, DeVries, according to a publisher's blurb, apparently came upon a previously unpublished poem of Walt Whitman's called "I Hear America Swinging," and decided to appropriate the title, although, to be fair, he does include the text of the Whitman discovery in his book. Also, for balance perhaps, a couple of lines from Edna St. Vincent Millay.

Credits concluded, DeVries launches into a laugh-punctuated account of his vision of what would be should the "swinging" phenomena infect the Middle West generally, and Iowa specifically. Being DeVries, of course, he does not confine himself solely to skewering this one form of contemporary behavior, using it rather as the main theme of his story but feeling free at any time to dash off and puncture — with loud cries of glee — other facets of contemporary culture which do not please him.

The funniest of these, perhaps, is the primitive art critic, with DeVries reasoning that if there is a primitive art it follows there should be a primitive art critic who when seeing a painting titled "Pulpit" exclaims "Pew." Also getting a deserved verbal drubbing is the mystique that has sprung up around wine, and here DeVries excels.

NBC to sponsor new daytime show

The network tried and failed to attract big ratings with "Take My Advice," a program styled after the "Dear Abby" newspaper column, but now is back with "The Gong Show" and "The Fun Factory."

Producers of both new weekday series hope their shows are the "something different" that many viewers are said to be looking for.

"Daytime needed something new and I think 'The Gong Show' is it," proclaims producer Gene Banks. Ed Fishman, one of the executive producers of "The Fun Factory," said his series fills the need in daytime for "something that didn't have a structure that says here's where we're going, either with a bonus round or a storyline."

On "The Gong Show," amateur performers are given a chance to display their talents to the TV audience and a panel of three celebrities, and if one of the three stars thinks the act stinks, he or she sounds the gong and ends it. Otherwise the performers continue and are awarded points, with the big winner each day walking off with $516.32.

One recent show featured four tap dancing sisters, a clown who juggled, a mime who did magic, a woman doing a Shirley Temple imitation and a man trying to sing. The latter two got the gong.

"The emphasis is on sheer fun and entertainment," says Banks. "It's not a school for talent. The celebrities do it with the idea of having fun, and the acts know beforehand they could get gonged."

Obviously, fun is also the goal of "The Fun Factory." It is a game show in the sense that prizes are given for answering questions, but that aspect shares the spotlight with comedy sketches, singing and dancing. There is no structured format and the pace is frenzied.

"It's like doing a different variety show every day," says Fishman. "It's completely different each day except for the opening and closing songs, which takes up a total of about a minute. We thought it was time to see if the daytime audience would find a change refreshing."

Unfortunately, a sample viewing of the two programs merely reaffirms that different is not necessarily better. Neither was any more engaging than its more traditional competitors.

"The Gong Show" had a few good moments, thanks to those performers who either were very good — or very bad. But the format of the show, with its reliance on witticisms from the celebrity guests and obnoxious comments from host Chuck Barris, precluded the chance for much development along those lines.

And "The Fun Factory" turned out to be a combination of the worst elements of comedy — deadly dull material — with the worst elements of game shows — giving expensive prizes for answering insultingly simple questions.

The two shows may mature in time. In any case, it's nice to see NBC making an effort to find something at least slightly different.

During this campaign I have made an effort to see all the voters of Mississippi County's First District. However, I know I have missed seeing some voters, and would like to take this opportunity to ask for your vote and support in my bid for County Judge.

I am very concerned about the tax problems of our farmers, businessmen and other citizens. With today's inflated land values, I am convinced that there should be at least one fairly substantial property owner and taxpayer on the County Court, as the Court's actions each year affect the valuations set on property and the taxes paid by all our people.

I am anxious and willing to serve the people of Mississippi County. I have served on the County Court previously from the Second District and I am qualified for the position of County Judge. I ask your help and support next Tuesday.

Lack of state agency may bother modical projects

By LAURA PATRICK
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY - Lesiglative disapproval of one state program has raised legal questions over $94 million worth of proposed health care facilities which need that program's approval to qualify for federal aid from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Legislators scuttled the Office of Comprehensive Health Planning, (OCHP) by eliminating six staff positions which appropriating only $285,000 of a request of nearly $400,000. Sharp criticism of the program by the Senate Appropriations Committee in addition to the budget cut, led to its termination June 30.

The OCHP, federally funded, was authorized under federal law to review all plans for major medical expenditures and to make recommendation of a "finding of need" of each project to the federal government.

The OCHP is presently drawing up a bill for a tougher comprehensive health plan to replace the discontinued program. Such a bill, if submitted to the legislature in January, would face opposition by legislators and the Governor, and could not go into effect for nearly a year even if passed.

HEW's response to the cancellation of the program has taken two forms.

In a letter to Gov. Christopher Bond last week, Max Milo Mills, HEW regional director in Kansas City, urged the state to consider reinstating the review program in some form. Mills said that cancelling the program would encourage overbuilding of health care facilities which would result in increased medical costs to the consumer.

Those questions are what action, if any, should be taken on applications now pending, what happens to applicants who were denied a "finding of need" and whether the federal government could withhold Medicaid increases from hospitals undertaking major expenditures on projects now that Missouri has no "finding of need" program.

One applicant, St. Frances Hospital in Cape Girardeau, has definitely continued its plans to purchase a Computerized Axial Tomography (CAT) scanner. CAT scanners cost about a half million dollars and have an operating cost of approximately $350,000 a year.

Edith Davis, an administrator at St. Francis Hospital, says the scanner will be installed January or February. "We don't feel there's going to be problem, so we're going ahead."

Southeast Hospital, also in Cape Girardeau, competed for the scanner, Mrs. Davis said. Before submitting its proposal to the state, the board at St. Francis Hospital hired a private consultant to evaluate both locations. Both hospitals had agreed to honor the consultant's opinion, which favored installing the scanner at St. Francis.

"We feel that we are within the law and that we would have been the place chosen," Mrs. Davis said. "We're probably the only hospital in this area that is going after the CAT scanner."

Memorial Hospital in West Plains had requested a "finding of need" for a $1.85 million, two-storied addition to house 34 additional beds, plus other services. When told their request probably would be denied, the hospital board withdrew the proposal and submitted one for a 16-bed addition.

"Based on their criteria, they said they couldn't justify the addition of 34 beds," Ken Clark, chief administrator at Memorial Hospital, said. He estimates that the entire process, delayed the project by about a year.

Sen. Emory Melton, R-Cassville, represents the district which includes West Plains. He says the original proposal should have been accepted by the state.

"If I lived in West Plains and got sick, I ought to be able to go to the hospital and have my doctor there," he said.

"It seemed to me the decision was arbitrary and unreasonable," Melton said, "so I went before the appropriations committee to find out how many people they (the OCHP) had, what they were doing and what was the justifications for their actions."

Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, was a major critic of the OCHP and of the "finding of need" program on the appropriations committee.

"They know nothing about medicine, but they have life or death control on whether a hospital can be expanded," he said. "They have no knowledge of the state of Missouri. We want people who know something about the people and their communities."

Webster said that increased Medicaid costs are due to other federal regulations which have "nothing to do" with termination of the "Finding of need" program. "If you wiped out the federal and state government involvement, you would reduce hospital costs to the average person by 30-40 percent," he said.

Sen. Webster expects to see a proposal for a new state health plan in the next legislative session and says he will "fight it tooth and nail." "We need to develop a program to keep the bureaucrats' cotton-picking hands out of community medical care and to get that bunch of laymen out of it," he said.

William Mitchell, OCHP director, says it is not his office's function to interpret medical terminology. "We based our decisions on approved standards and criteria which were submitted to the governor's advisory group," he said. "These were developed by professionals in medicine — physicians, hospital administrators, nurses."

Mitchell says that the OCHP is not ignorant or indifferent to community needs and preferences. "The applicant himself defines what services he wants. In our evaluation there's at least one, if not more public hearings, which allow local citizens to vote."

"That's why we went ahead and approved a 16-bed addition in West Plains," Mitchell said. "Their occupancy rate hadn't been that high, but we recognized that their community was a growing community."

The original application had been discouraged, he said, because of new facilities planned in that area. "There's a new hospital 16 miles away in Mountain View," he said. "We didn't want to see its operations adversely affected. Our analysis also showed two new hospitals going up nearby in northern Arkansas."

Mitchell disagreed with Sen. Webster's contention that termination of the program has not affected medicaid cost increases.

"No one can expect what we are doing in and of itself, to hold down the costs of health care. But the program was designed only to restrict unnecessary and needless duplication of health care services."

There's evidence, Mitchell says, to indicate that the program was significantly fighting inflation of medical costs. "This year alone, approximately $20 million in capital expenditures were not made in the health care field due to recommendations of "no finding of need," he said.

"And in discussing concepts and criteria with the applicants, they will many times make modifications that reduce costs, in order to receive a "finding of need." All these savings are eventually passed on to the patient."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — William and Emily Harris, by resting their case without calling a witness, have blocked their former underground companion, Patricia Hearst, from testifying against them. The move was the second major surprise of Tuesday's court sesion, and it means the Harrises' fate will probably be placed in the hands of jurors by the end of the week. The Harrises' lawyer denied that the move was intended to block Miss Hearst's testimony, but that was its effect nevertheless. The day's first big surprise was a prosecution announcement that Miss Hearst would turn state's evidence against her former fugitive traveling companions.

SAN LEANDRO, Calif. (AP) — James L. Schoenfeld, wanted in the Chowchila mass kidnaping, has left behind him atrail of gun deels and aborted attempts to reach Canada, officials say. But the most painful fact for the authoritiesis that the trail is already a week old. Echtenfeld end another suspct, Frederick N. Woods IV, continue to elude officers despite the clues, and despite a much-publicized manhunt for them. They are being sought on arrest warrants.

CHICAGO (AP) — A "stable, friendly, hard-working" toy designer took a gun to work, killed three persons, shot two more and then killed himself. Police found notes on his body indicating he thought his coworkers were plotting to destroy him. Police said Tuesday that Albert Keller, 33, had killed himself, two partners of Marvin Glass & Associates, and another designer. One employe was hospitalized in guarded condition and another in satisfactory condition.

Lack of state agency may bother modical projects

By LAURA PATRICK
Missouri Press News

JEFFERSON CITY - Lesiglative disapproval of one state program has raised legal questions over $94 million worth of proposed health care facilities which need that program's approval to qualify for federal aid from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Legislators scuttled the Office of Comprehensive Health Planning, (OCHP) by eliminating six staff positions which appropriating only $285,000 of a request of nearly $400,000. Sharp criticism of the program by the Senate Appropriations Committee in addition to the budget cut, led to its termination June 30.

The OCHP, federally funded, was authorized under federal law to review all plans for major medical expenditures and to make recommendation of a "finding of need" of each project to the federal government.

The OCHP is presently drawing up a bill for a tougher comprehensive health plan to replace the discontinued program. Such a bill, if submitted to the legislature in January, would face opposition by legislators and the Governor, and could not go into effect for nearly a year even if passed.

HEW's response to the cancellation of the program has taken two forms.

In a letter to Gov. Christopher Bond last week, Max Milo Mills, HEW regional director in Kansas City, urged the state to consider reinstating the review program in some form. Mills said that cancelling the program would encourage overbuilding of health care facilities which would result in increased medical costs to the consumer.

Those questions are what action, if any, should be taken on applications now pending, what happens to applicants who were denied a "finding of need" and whether the federal government could withhold Medicaid increases from hospitals undertaking major expenditures on projects now that Missouri has no "finding of need" program.

One applicant, St. Frances Hospital in Cape Girardeau, has definitely continued its plans to purchase a Computerized Axial Tomography (CAT) scanner. CAT scanners cost about a half million dollars and have an operating cost of approximately $350,000 a year.

Edith Davis, an administrator at St. Francis Hospital, says the scanner will be installed January or February. "We don't feel there's going to be problem, so we're going ahead."

Southeast Hospital, also in Cape Girardeau, competed for the scanner, Mrs. Davis said. Before submitting its proposal to the state, the board at St. Francis Hospital hired a private consultant to evaluate both locations. Both hospitals had agreed to honor the consultant's opinion, which favored installing the scanner at St. Francis.

"We feel that we are within the law and that we would have been the place chosen," Mrs. Davis said. "We're probably the only hospital in this area that is going after the CAT scanner."

A hospital whose application was processed shorthly before termination of the program is proceeding with plans which represents half of its original proposal.

Memorial Hospital in West Plains had requested a "finding of need" for a $1.85 million, two-storied addition to house 34 additional beds, plus other services. When told their request probably would be denied, the hospital board withdrew the proposal and submitted one for a 16-bed addition.

"Based on their criteria, they said they couldn't justify the addition of 34 beds," Ken Clark, chief administrator at Memorial Hospital, said. He estimates that the entire process, delayed the project by about a year.

Sen. Emory Melton, R-Cassville, represents the district which includes West Plains. He says the original proposal should have been accepted by the state.

"If I lived in West Plains and got sick, I ought to be able to go to the hospital and have my doctor there," he said.

"It seemed to me the decision was arbitrary and unreasonable," Melton said, "so I went before the appropriations committee to find out how many people they (the OCHP) had, what they were doing and what was the justifications for their actions."

Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, was a major critic of the OCHP and of the "finding of need" program on the appropriations committee.

"They know nothing about medicine, but they have life or death control on whether a hospital can be expanded," he said. "They have no knowledge of the state of Missouri. We want people who know something about the people and their communities."

Webster said that increased Medicaid costs are due to other federal regulations which have "nothing to do" with termination of the "Finding of need" program. "If you wiped out the federal and state government involvement, you would reduce hospital costs to the average person by 30-40 percent," he said.

Sen. Webster expects to see a proposal for a new state health plan in the next legislative session and says he will "fight it tooth and nail." "We need to develop a program to keep the bureaucrats' cotton-picking hands out of community medical care and to get that bunch of laymen out of it," he said.

William Mitchell, OCHP director, says it is not his office's function to interpret medical terminology. "We based our decisions on approved standards and criteria which were submitted to the governor's advisory group," he said. "These were developed by professionals in medicine — physicians, hospital administrators, nurses."

Mitchell says that the OCHP is not ignorant or indifferent to community needs and preferences. "The applicant himself defines what services he wants. In our evaluation there's at least one, if not more public hearings, which allow local citizens to vote."

New Madrid banks to receive allocated funds

JEFFERSON CITY — State Treasurer James I. Spainhower has announced that two New Madrid County banks will receive $245,000 from the third statewide allocation of general funds under the Missouri Model for the Investment of Inactive Funds.

He said $145,000 will be available to Tri-County Bank of Morehouse and $100,000 to Peoples Bank of Lilbourn.

Spainhower says the total amount distributed under the allocation this year is over $60 million. Every bank in the state was given an equal opportunity to apply for these funds.

Banks receiving deposits from this allocation will pay to the state the current market rate of interest which is approximately six per cent.

The distribution is based on a formula which returns an amount to each county proportional to the amount paid by that county in state sales and income tax. According to Spainhower, this formula standardizes the requirements which must be met by banks before they can be selected for the deposit of these general funds.

Armed forces

Richard L. Coke, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Coke, 314 Jackson St., has enlisted in the United States Air Force, according to Staff Sgt. Jim Riggs, the local recruiter here.

Shortly after the enlistment ceremony, Airman Coke flew to Lackland Air Force Base near San Antonio, Tex., for six weeks of basic training. The 1976 Sikeston High School graduate has accepted a guaranteed job as a radio relay equipment repairman.

After basic training, he will attend training to be a radio relay repairman. He will learn to install, repair, modify and maintain microwave and portable radio relays, among other radio equipment, indicate positioning layout for placing and mounting equipment on floors, walls and ceilings and perform various other functions related to radio relay equipment.

Land trust seeks swamps to preserve

NEW YORK (AP) — To the people who run The American Land Trust, the nicest thing you could do to observe the Bicentennial would be to give the public a nice piece of land, like a swamp, a bog, a creek or the side of a mountain.

The trust, working with The Nature Conservancy, will guarantee not to develop it, but instead will seek to preserve its "ecological integrity" for the nation's third century.

The conservancy, outgrowth of an organization begun in 1917, is aptly named. "The highest and best use for much land is to leave it alone," says Patrick Noonan, president of the organization, based in Arlington, Va.

The trust is a two-year effort by people prominent in government, business and finances to sell the conservation idea to the public, including the executives of land-rich companies. It seeks donations to the conservancy.

Says Dan Luftin, cochairman of the trust and a founder of the Donaldson, Luftin and Jenrette securities firm, "It's one of the few ways that the corporate citizen or individual can participate rather than be a spectator in the Bicentennial."

Two of the first donations the trust obtained for the conservancy were gifts of thousands of forest and farmland acres in the Great Dismal Swamp of Virginia and North Carolina that had attracted developers since colonial times.

The gifts, by Union Camp and Weyerhaeuser, two of the nation's biggest timber companies, will be deeded by the conservancy to the U.S. Department of Interior, to be preserved as part of the Great Dismal Swamp Wildlife Refuge.

Perhaps to assuage some not so conservative stockholders, Alexander Calder Jr., Union Camp chairman, commented at the time that the gifts were financially as well as emotionally sound.

Explaining, Noonan observes that many companies carry land on their books as a "dead asset," when they could seek out the conservancy, have the land impartially appraised, donate it, and obtain an income tax deduction.

Noonan and George Wils, executive director of the trust, are now calling on insurance companies, manufacturers, natural resource concerns and others who might have unique acreage or, just as acceptable, money to give.

Possessed of a zeal for their cause — Noonan is a convert from real estate development — they work with the nation's garden clubs to raise small cash donations, and more than incidentally, influence corporate executives through their wives.

The trust has set a commitment of no less than $200 million in "donations of land itself or in contributions that will be used directly to save significant natural and wilderness areas."

Donations of securities or money — as little as $10 qualifies the donor for a year's membership in the conservancy — are an especially important part of the program because a good deal of the land must be bought rather than begged.

Thus the conservancy, with backing from the trust, recently put up $1 million to help buy a 76,000-acre tract of prime ranch land in the Mt. Haggin area of the Rocky Mountains in Montana.

A description of the land by the trust and the conservancy attests to its appeal:

"Cresting to more than 10,000 feet in places, the Mt. Haggin area land acquired is a 119-square-mile tract along the Continental Divide. It is comprised of snow-capped mountains, Alpine meadows, pine forests and lush river valleys which provide refuge for a variety of wildlife — elk, mountain goat, moose, deer, bighorn sheep, mountain lion and greater sandhill crane, as well as the endangered peregrine falcon."

Federal funds allotted to private schools

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Missouri plan requiring remedial programs in parochial and private schools to be held after regular school hours or on weekends will be bypassed by federal officials.

William Pierce, acting federal education commissioner, has notified the state of his plans to invoke bypass provisions of the federal law and order federal education funds for the programs during regular school hours.

State Education Commissioner Arthur L. Mallory said it is uncertain whether the bypass will be statewide or affect only four districts—in St. Louis, Kansas City, Jefferson City and St. Joseph.

Mallory said Sunday the bypass will mean that money will be taken from the public school district allocation and given directly to the non-public schools for the remedial programs.

Parochial school leaders, charging that a state plan adopted last year had cut in half the participation in remedial programs by poor children in parochial schools, sought the bypass in January.

The state plan was drafted to comply with the Missouri Constitution's strict provisions on church-state separation. The plan required remedial mathematics and reading courses at parochial schools be held after school hours or on weekends.

The plan said in effect that the use of federally paid teachers in nonpublic schools during regular school hours is prohibited by the state Constitution.

The remedial subjects had been taught at parochial schools during regular school hours in the preceding two years.

But the state Education Board and a federal judge agreed that a U.S. Supreme Court ruling requiring "comparable" services did not mean "identical" services. As a result, the classes were set for after-school or weekend hours.

That in turn led to a drop in remedial enrollment in parochial schools, due chiefly to parents' complaints of long school days and transportation difficulties and their fears for the safety of children after dark.

The controversy began in Kansas City in 1970 when parents of children attending two Catholic schools sued the state, contending they had been denied their rights to remedial teaching for their children in their schools.

The case eventually reached the U.S. Supreme Court, which ruled in June 1974 that students in nonpublic schools were entitled to federally financed remedial programs "comparable" to those provided to public school students.

But the Supreme Court refused to decide whether public school teachers could continue to be assigned to parochial schools during regular school hours, leaving the issue to local determination.

Area Eagle Scouts to go to Washington

CAPE GIRARDEAU — Three scouts from the Southeast Missouri Council will be serving as a living display of the benefits of Scouting among some 760 Eagle Scouts and leaders from throughout the United States who are participating in the National Eagle Scout Bicentennial Celebration this summer in Washington, D.C.

Representing Southeast Missouri are Michael R. Bertrand and Jon Mark Kasten of Cape Girardeau and Kenneth J. Stoll of Poplar Bluff.

Bertrand and Kasten will be in Washington Aug. 1-14 and Stoll will be there Aug. 5-18.

The Eagle Scouts, according to the Rev. Claude Stone, chairman of the Eagle Scout Association of the Southeast Missouri Council, represent every state in the nation and have been selected from among the country's 426 local councils to participate in the celebration, which began June 6 and will continue through Aug. 30 in rotational 14-day activities.

"The event is designed not only to focus the attention of millions of visitors to the nation's capital on the importance of the scouting program in training the country's youth, but also to give the public a firsthand impression of scouting through the observation of scout skill demonstrations," the Rev. Mr. Stone said.

Everything from cooking and hiking to leatherwork will be among the many presentations offered by scouts to visitors at the Scouting-USA Center, a geodesic dome located on the Mall near the Lincoln Memorial and the Festival of American Folklife.

Land trust seeks swamps to preserve

NEW YORK (AP) — To the people who run The American Land Trust, the nicest thing you could do to observe the Bicentennial would be to give the public a nice piece of land, like a swamp, a bog, a creek or the side of a mountain.

The trust, working with The Nature Conservancy, will guarantee not to develop it, but instead will seek to preserve its "ecological integrity" for the nation's third century.

The conservancy, outgrowth of an organization begun in 1917, is aptly named. "The highest and best use for much land is to leave it alone," says Patrick Noonan, president of the organization, based in Arlington, Va.

The trust is a two-year effort by people prominent in government, business and finances to sell the conservation idea to the public, including the executives of land-rich companies. It seeks donations to the conservancy.

Says Dan Lufkin, cochairman of the trust and a founder of the Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette securities firm, "It's one of the few ways that the corporate citizen or individual can participate rather than be a spectator in the Bicentennial."

Two of the first donations the trust obtained for the conservancy were gifts of thousands of forest and farmland acres in the Great Dismal Swamp of Virginia and North Carolina that had attracted developers since colonial times.

The gifts, by Union Camp and Weyerhaeuser, two of the nation's biggest timber companies, will be deeded by the conservancy to the U.S. Department of Interior, to be preserved as part of the Great Dismal Swamp Wildlife Refuge.

Perhaps to assuage some not so conservative stockholders, Alexander Calder Jr., Union Camp chairman, commented at the time that the gifts were financially as well as emotionally sound.

Explaining, Noonan observes that many companies carry land on their books as a "dead asset," when they could seek out the conservancy, have the land impartially appraised, donate it, and obtain an income tax deduction.

Noonan and George Wils, executive director of the trust, are now calling on insurance companies, manufacturers, natural resource concerns and others who might have unique acreage or, just as acceptable, money to give.

Possessed of a zeal for their cause — Noonan is a convert from real estate development — they work with the nation's garden clubs to raise small cash donations, and more than incidentally, influence corporate executives through their wives.

The trust has set a commitment of no less than $200 million in "donations of land itself or in contributions that will be used directly to save significant natural and wilderness areas."

Donations of securities or money — as little as $10 qualifies the donor for a year's membership in the conservancy — are an especially important part of the program because a good deal of the land must be bought rather than begged.

Thus the conservancy, with backing from the trust, recently put up $1 million to help buy a 76,000-acre tract of prime ranch land in the Mt. Haggin area of the Rocky Mountains in Montana.

A description of the land by the trust and the conservancy attests to its appeal:

"Cresting to more than 10,000 feet in places, the Mt. Haggin area land acquired is a 119-square-mile tract along the Continental Divide. It is comprised of snow-capped mountains, Alpine meadows, pine forests and lush river valleys which provide refuge for a variety of wildlife — elk, mountain goat, moose, deer, bighorn sheep, mountain lion and greater sandhill crane, as well as the endangered peregrine falcon."

Federal funds allotted to private schools

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A Missouri plan requiring remedial programs in parochial and private schools to be held after regular school hours or on weekends will be bypassed by federal officials.

William Pierce, acting federal education commissioner, has notified the state of his plans to invoke bypass provisions of the federal law and order federal education funds for the programs during regular school hours.

Symington has slim margin over Litton

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Two very close Democratic races could be shaping up in next week's Missouri primary election, according to a statewide public opinion poll commissioned by the Kansas City Star.

Rep. James Symington, D-Mo., holds a slim margin over Rep. Jerry Litton, D-Mo., for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator, according to 527 registered voters interviewed over the telephone by Research Information Center of Phoenix.

And Joseph Teasdale of Kansas City and state Sen. William Cason, D-Clinton, are running a close first and second in the race for the Missouri Democratic gubernatorial nomination, according to the poll.

Senate results of the poll were published in a copyrighted story by the Star Sunday. The gubernatorial findings were printed Monday in a copyrighted story by the Star's sister paper, the Kansas City Times.

The poll showed Symington, who hopes to succeed his retiring father, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., with 29.6 per cent of the vote, Litton with 28.5 per cent and former Missouri Gov. Warren hearnes with 18.8.

Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler had 1.7 per cent and the remaining 21 per cent were undecided.

The poll represented a significant gain for Litton, who has mounted an extensive television campaign in recent weeks. A similar poll in June showed him trailing Symington, 31.4 per cent to 18.7.

The winner of the Aug. 3 primary will face Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, who has only token GOP opposition.

Teasdale, a former Jackson County prosecutor, was favored by 27.3 per cent of those interviewed, while Cason was the choice of 20.3 per cent.

But 49.8 per cent of those interviewed said they were still undecided and the remaining 2.6 per cent was shared by seven minor candidates.

The winner will battle Republican Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who has only minor primary opposition, in the Nov. 2 general election.

Charges may not affect customer bills

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A proposed law to prohibit utilities from charging customers for a portion of long-range construction projects before their completion would not affect customer bills as much as some supporters believe, members of the Missouri Public Service Commission said today.

The measure is expected to be submitted to voters in November if sufficient signatures on petitions are verified. The proposal was prompted by the commission's approval earlier this year for both Union Electric Co. of St. Louis and Kansas City Power and Light Co. to begin charging customers for portions of the costs of major construction projects.

Commissioner Charles Fain said that in the case of Union Electric, inclusion of a portion of the construction costs for its nuclear power plan enabled other factors considered in rate increase requests to be reduced. The UE plant, which will cost an estimated $1.8 Billion, will not go into operation until 1981.

Fain pointed out that the only thing UE customers are paying for now is the interest on the bonds the company has sold to finance the plant and not the full cost of construction to date.

Because the interest is assured through rate payments, Fain said, the company's risk is less and it is better able to secure outside funding to maintain its equity.

Were the interest not insured, the risk of the utility for investors would be greater, making it harder to secure outside investment and requiring higher rates so the company's equity could still be maintained at a fair level.

Fain acknowledged, however, that there was no way to estimate whether the trade-off would result in no change in a customer's bill. But he also said that paying for construction of major projects while underway evened out the impact on the customer of the total cost of a project. If assessment of the nuclear plant's cost was delayed until after it was completed, customer bills then would jump by 35 per cent, Fain predicted.

Backers of the proposed measure claim it is unfair to charge customers today for a plant that they may not benefit from once it goes into operation years later.

Symington has slim margin over Litton

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Two very close Democratic races could be shaping up in next week's Missouri primary election, according to a statewide public opinion poll commissioned by the Kansas City Star.

Rep. James Symington, D-Mo., holds a slim margin over Rep. Jerry Litton, D-Mo., for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senator, according to 527 registered voters interviewed over the telephone by Research Information Center of Phoenix.

And Joseph Teasdale of Kansas City and state Sen. William Cason, D-Clinton, are running a close first and second in the race for the Missouri Democratic gubernatorial nomination, according to the poll.

Senate results of the poll were published in a copyrighted story by the Star Sunday. The gubernatorial findings were printed Monday in a copyrighted story by the Star's sister paper, the Kansas City Times.

The poll showed Symington, who hopes to succeed his retiring father, Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., with 29.6 per cent of the vote, Litton with 28.5 per cent and former Missouri Gov. Warren hearnes with 18.8.

Kansas City Mayor Charles Wheeler had 1.7 per cent and the remaining 21 per cent were undecided.

The poll represented a significant gain for Litton, who has mounted an extensive television campaign in recent weeks. A similar poll in June showed him trailing Symington, 31.4 per cent to 18.7.

The winner of the Aug. 3 primary will face Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, who has only token GOP opposition.

Teasdale, a former Jackson County prosecutor, was favored by 27.3 per cent of those interviewed, while Cason was the choice of 20.3 per cent.

But 49.8 per cent of those interviewed said they were still undecided and the remaining 2.6 per cent was shared by seven minor candidates.

The winner will battle Republican Gov. Christopher S. Bond, who has only minor primary opposition, in the Nov. 2 general election.

Charges may not affect customer bills

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A proposed law to prohibit utilities from charging customers for a portion of long-range construction projects before their completion would not affect customer bills as much as some supporters believe, members of the Missouri Public Service Commission said today.

The measure is expected to be submitted to voters in November if sufficient signatures on petitions are verified. The proposal was prompted by the commission's approval earlier this year for both Union Electric Co. of St. Louis and Kansas City Power and Light Co. to begin charging customers for portions of the costs of major construction projects.

Commissioner Charles Fain said that in the case of Union Electric, inclusion of a portion of the construction costs for its nuclear power plan enabled other factors considered in rate increase requests to be reduced. The UE plant, which will cost an estimated $1.8 Billion, will not go into operation until 1981.

Fain pointed out that the only thing UE customers are paying for now is the interest on the bonds the company has sold to finance the plant and not the full cost of construction to date.

Because the interest is assured through rate payments, Fain said, the company's risk is less and it is better able to secure outside funding to maintain its equity.

Were the interest not insured, the risk of the utility for investors would be greater, making it harder to secure outside investment and requiring higher rates so the company's equity could still be maintained at a fair level.

Fain acknowledged, however, that there was no way to estimate whether the trade-off would result in no change in a customer's bill. But he also said that paying for construction of major projects while underway evened out the impact on the customer of the total cost of a project. If assessment of the nuclear plant's cost was delayed until after it was completed, customer bills then would jump by 35 per cent, Fain predicted.

Backers of the proposed measure claim it is unfair to charge customers today for a plant that they may not benefit from once it goes into operation years later.

Musicians tell of struggles in career

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — In 1974, Jim Cowen and David Anderson wrote "Texas Is My Home," but like most of the country music written, it never got beyond the reception room of a record producer's office.

"It never went anywhere because by then everybody had been Texased to death," said Cowen, a native of Rogers, Tex.

While Cowen was trying to sell the song, Zeke Sheppard was playing rhythm guitar and harmonica in Canadian one-nighters, many times on the same bill with Gordon Lightfoot or David Clayton Thomas.

But, Sheppard, who did many after-hours jams with Lightfoot, decided he would have to migrate to Nashville in order to make it in country music.

Since 1974, Cowen has written several more songs, played a lot of gigs, and had all but forgotten about the song.

Cowen agrees, saying, "It's a good way to get to know the right people."

Earlier this year, record producer Scott Turner asked fellow Canadian Sheppard if he would like to record "Texas Is My Home."

"Scotty played it for me and I flipped out over it," Sheppard said. "There's a lot of lyric content that I associate with; I just feel its a great song."

A Canadian law, requiring one-third of the music played on radio stations be of Canadian subject matter, gave rise to an unprecedented idea.

Sheppard and Turner changed a word or two here and there, moving the locale of the song from Texas to Canada, virtually guaranteeing air play in the provinces.

San Antonio was replaced with Peggy's Cove and Lone Star Beer fell to Moosehead Ale. But the basic storyline and music remained unchanged.

The result: "Cape Breton Is My Home." Cowen admits he didn't like the idea at first.

"I had the same reaction as any songwriter. I didn't like the idea," Cowen said. "But after hearing the changes, I realized it just added to the song."

Sheppard recorded both versions of the song, adding his harmonica to the mix. Plans call for the song to be released simultaneously in the United States and Canada in September.

Major changes in cars ducat end of century

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — Major changes in the automobile industry are unlikely by the turn of the century, according to the chief of the second largest auto maker.

"The auto business in the 1970s has been much like that of the 1960s, and it's quite probable the auto business of the 1980s, 1990s and beyond will still bear some resemblance to the business as we know it today," according to Henry Ford II, chairman of the Ford Motor Co.

Ford, whose grandfather helped found the world's largest industry 75 years ago, discussed the future of the industry Sunday in an opening address of the first annual Automotive World Congress.

Looking at the more immediate future, Ford said after his talk that chances of a strike in the industry this year are low, but if it comes his company stands a "nine out of 10 chance" of being picked as the target.

Traditionally, the UAW selects one company as its strike or settlement target.

Industry negotiations with the United Auto Workers began last week. The current three-year contract covering 680,000 workers expires in mid-September.

In his talk, Ford scoffed at science fiction writers who forecast a decade ago that motor vehicle transportation in the year 2000 would be "a dazzling, Buck Rogers-like world of plush, electronically controlled ground vehicles."

Cars would continue to be powered by conventional gasoline piston engines for "at least the next several decades," he said, and there will be sufficient petroleum reserves to keep them running.

And, Ford said, there will be no inevitable conversion to mass-transportation down the road: "The real mass-transit system in the United States is the highway system and the automobile."

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The Afrikaners, proud, stubborn and in full political control, hold the destiny of this racially divided land in their hands.

Little known outside South Africa, these descendants of Dutch and French Huguenot pioneers dominate the white minority that governs South Africa.

They make up roughly two-thirds of the nation's four million whites and firmly control politics and government administration.

As novelist Alan Paton sees it, the future of South Africa, home of 18 million voteless blacks, depends on the outcome of an historical confrontation between blacks and Afrikaners.

"My view is that the future depends really more on the Afrikaner and the black man than it does on us (English-speaking South Africans)," he said in a recent interview. "We're the onlookers."

A thread of antipathy between English and Afrikaan-speaking South Africans runs throughout the history of this nation, once ruled by Britain.

The hostility lingers on, muted, joked about and officially dismissed as irrelevant but nevertheless real.

There is a sense of national unity among the white groups and yet many Afrikaners remain aloof, stridently clinging to their separate culture in what has become known as "Afrikaner nationalism."

Many English-speaking South Africans blame the conservative Afrikaners almost entirely for South Africa's controversial racial laws of apartheid—separate racial development, although a British-imposed color bar came first.

But Afrikaners argue that many of South Africa's English-speakers are in no hurry to dismantle the privileged position whites enjoy despite the political abuse they hurl at the government.

Fiercely independent, the Afrikaners have defied the colonial Dutch East India Co., the British Empire and now the world in their determination to carve a homeland in southern Africa.

They came in ships from the Netherlands and France and over the years evolved a new language and culture — its roots in Europe — which blossomed in Africa.

In Cape Town, they came under the rule of the British Empire, which eventually led to the "Great Trek" of 1836 when the Voortrekkers, seeking to escape British control plunged into the interior fighting off hostile blacks to eventually create the Boer republics.

While the British won the Anglo-Boer War, which ended in 1902, the Afrikaners won the peace, culminating in the victory of the Afrikaner-dominated National party in the elections of 1948.

In the past quarter of a century the National party has mounted a formidable edifice of race legislation to ensure white domination of South Africa.

This poicy of separate race development has come to be called "apartheid" and is characterized by its discrimination against blacks and the division of the country into scattered tribal homelands or reserves, due for ultimate political independence, but constituting only 13 per cent of the nation's land area.

The Afrikaner architects of this policy are not defensive about apartheid but rather proclaim it as the only way of maintaining racial peace and preserving white civilization in southern Africa.

But a significant number of leading Afrikaner academics, intellectuals, newspaper editors and others are clamoring for change.

It reflects a political division between what have become known as the "verligtes" or enlightened Afrikaners and the "verkramptes" or narrow-minded ones.

Willem de Klerk, editor of the National party organ Die Transvaler in the Transvaal Province, coined the words in 1967 and is one of the leading "verligtes" in the Afrikaner-press.

"Discrimination offends black people, is full of explosive emotions and is a poisonous hatred and the fuse to light the conflagration of southern Africa," he wrote recently.

That view is shared by a growing number of Afrikaner opinion makers who are asking in effect for a re-examination of the entire policy of apartheid as it now exists.

Thus, argue the verligtes, Prime Minister John Vorster is in a position of having to find a way of instituting change without appearing to endanger white supremacy.

"The Soweto riots were a blessing in disguise," was the observation of one Afrikaner newspaper. "Now he has an excuse to do something."

Ironically, it was Afrikaner chauvinism that probably sparked the troubles in the black townships outside Johannesburg and the capital of Pretoria because of the insistance that black schools teach half their courses in Afrikan despite a black preference for English.

Debate to begin on banning laetrile

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The growing clamor of cancer patients for the illegal substance laetrile heads for a showdown in federal appeals court this week as a three-judge panel prepares for arguments over whether the Food and Drug Administration has the right to ban the product.

The specific case which will be heard July 30 in Santa Fe, N.M., by a panel of the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals involves a ruling by an Oklahoma City federal judge who allowed the importation of laetrile by individual patients from Mexico, where it is legal.

U.S. District Court Judge Luther Bohanon has allowed more than a dozen cancer patients to obtain laetrile, which is synthesized from apricot seeds which the Food and Drug Administration said have been responsible for several fatal and non-fatal cyanide poisoning cases.

Alaskan doctors, meanwhile, can administer laetrile since the state legislature passed a bill opening the way for its use and it became law when the Gov. Jay Hammond neither signed nor vetoed the measure. Laetrile still could be banned, however, if the state medical board rules that it is harmful.

The FDA ban affects interstate shipments of the substance. Individual states can regulate its use within their own borders.

Bohanan's first ruling — the one under appeal by the FDA — came in 1975. He ordered that Kansas cancer patient Glen L. Rutherford could import a six-month supply of the substance, also marketed as Vitamin B17 and amygdalin.

Rutherford, of Conway Springs, Kan., says, "I owe my life to it."

Bohanon has since granted requests from other cancer patients, saying it would be "out and out cruelty" to deny the people a chance to use laetrile.

His orders have prohibited the FDA from interfering with the importation of laetrile for the individuals and have granted the patients' physicians immunity from prosecution in administering the substance.

Asst. U.S. Attorney Bill Price of Oklahoma City, presenting the government's case, contends that the courts have no jurisdiction in the matter because persons desiring laetrile have not followed guidelines established by Congress for getting a "drug" approved.

"Congress has designated that a drug is not to be marketed in this country unless it is approved by one agency and one agency only — and that is the FDA," Price says.

Attorneys for the cancer victims contend that laetrile is not in a strict sense a drug, but a food or a food supplement, and therefore should not be prohibited by the FDA. Price says it is represented as a cure for disease, which is the legal definition of a drug."

Price says companies which wish to market laetrile in the United States should submit proof of its remedial properties to the FDA, which could review the study and approve or disapprove of Laetrile. If the FDA denied such evidence, then the marketers of laetrile could appeal to federal district court, Price says.

"The drug has been around for 25 years and the people who make it in Mexico have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars on propaganda saying it's great," Price adds. "But they haven't done anything about having it proved."

Persons who have been allowed to import laetrile say they are charged between $6 and $11 per bottle, the daily dosage in some cases. Medical authorities say the cost of synthesizing laetrile could vary greatly, depending on purity.

"As we see it, laetrile is still an unapproved drug," says Jerry Henderson, FDA program manage for consumer affairs in Region Six headquartered in Dallas. "It has never been shown to be effective in any study against cancer."

The NCI has conducted laetrile tests with animals in 1957, 1960, 1969, 1973, 1975 and is currently testing it against a mouse lung tumor, but officials say all "have failed to produce evidence of anticancer activity."

"We have the deepest sympathy for individuals suffering from cancer, and we join with all Americans in hoping for a break-through in the search for a cure," Henderson says. "We regret Judge Bohanan's ruling because it may cause some patients to skip recognized drugs and go directly to laetrile."

An Oklahoma City attorney who represented his father in an effort to be allowed to legally use laetrile says his family had tried chemotherapy and cobalt treatments without success against lymph system cancer before turning to the contraband substance.

"I believe in the use of laetrile," Gassaway says. "My father's death has not changed that position."

"There is no proof that laetrile is harmful," Bohanon said in court. "Anyone suffering with this horrible disease of cancer should have everything they want that is not harmful."

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The Afrikaners, proud, stubborn and in full political control, hold the destiny of this racially divided land in their hands.

Little known outside South Africa, these descendants of Dutch and French Huguenot pioneers dominate the white minority that governs South Africa.

They make up roughly two-thirds of the nation's four million whites and firmly control politics and government administration.

South Africa's English-speakers, generally more widely known abroad, are impotent politically and basically passengers in an Afrikaner boat.

As novelist Alan Paton sees it, the future of South Africa, home of 18 million voteless blacks, depends on the outcome of an historical confrontation between blacks and Afrikaners.

"My view is that the future depends really more on the Afrikaner and the black man than it does on us (English-speaking South Africans)," he said in a recent interview. "We're the onlookers."

A thread of antipathy between English and Afrikaan-speaking South Africans runs throughout the history of this nation, once ruled by Britain.

One year ago: President Ford was welcomed by huge crowds on a visit to Warsaw, Poland.

Today's birthdays: Mrs. Aristotle Onassis is 47 years old. Deep sea explorer Jacques Piccard is 54.

Thought for today: Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap — the Bible.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, after church services at Ticonderoga, N.Y., the American Declaration

Helmets are modeled after World War II's

ABERDEEN, Md. (AP) — The steel helmet that World War II GIs used to cook rations and wash their socks is going the way of the cannon ball and Gatling gun.

In emergencies, the old helmet had also served as a foxhole digger.

Researchers at the Army's Human Engineering Laboratory here have developed a synthetic helmet which resembles a cross between what a German World War II helmet and the protective headgear now worn by motorcyclists.

Lab officials insist it was not modeled after the German helmet, but its developers have dubbed it "Fritz" because it has a protective skirt covering the back of the neck.

The design is an attempt to provide more protection and to make the helmet fit more comfortably by shifting the center of gravity backward and toward the center of the head, an Army spokesman said.

Final testing of the new helmet is scheduled for the fall. The Army hopes to have it in regular issue by 1980. The six-year development project has cost $2.5 million.

Critics of the old helmet complain that it is heavy, uncomfortable and unwieldy. Unlike the new headgear, the old steel helmet comes in one size with a plastic helmet liner.

Developed in the 1930's, the old helmet is made of Hadfield steel alloy and weighs 56 ounces. Its replacement will weigh between 47 ounces and 53 ounces, depending on size, and will be made either of Kevlar, a substance designed by DuPont to replace steel cords in automobile tires, or fiber glass.

Hearnes will take 'Show Me' to Washington

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Former Missouri Gov. Warren E. Hearnes vowed over the weekend to take a "Show Me" in Washington attitude if he is elected to the U.S. Senate.

"I'm going to have to be shown while some millionaires pay no taxes while the ordinary family struggles to make ends meet," Hearnes said here Saturday night.

"I'm going to have to be shown why we have billions of dollars for foreign countries while we still have hungry people back home."

Hearnes made the statement at the 13th annual birthday party for himself and his wife. He was 53 and Mrs. Hearnes turned 49.

A statewide public opinion poll published Sunday by the Kansas City Star showed Hearnes a distant third behind two other Democrats seeking the post, Rep. James Symington and Rep. Jerry Litton, both D-Mo.

Construction of cement plant is scheduled

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo. (AP) — Construction of a one million ton cement plant will begin here early next year, J.F. Poole, president and chairman of the board of Marquette Co. of Nashville, announced Monday.

The $70 to $80 million plant, scheduled to go into operation in 1980, is expected to replace a 250,000 ton plant. Marquette has operated a plant here since 1923.

Marquette, a subidiary of Gulf and Western Corp., said it chose to expand here because of barge access to the Mississippi River system.

Sen. Symington plans to justify air base move

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., says he plans to make the Air Force justify its intended personnel move from Richards-Gebaur Air Force Base here to Scott Air Force Base near Belleville, Ill.

"I'm confident that we are not going to lose Richards-Gebaur," Symington said Saturday at a news conference here.

Symington's remarks came after the Senate failed to override President Ford's veto of a military aid bill that would have delayed the transfer of 3,920 military and civilian personnel.
